A Split on Guam

By Robert C. Albright.

A poll of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee on proposed harbor and aviation improvements at Guam yesterday disclosed a sharp cleavage, with eight Senators against development of the island, six for and three noncommittal.

Anticipating opposition, Chairman Walsh proposed submission of the $5,000,000 Guam authorization in a separate measure, as a straight commercial aviation and navigation item, apart from the national defense program.

No Party Lines

Walsh called a meeting of his 17-member committee for this morning to consider the $48,800,000 Navy base measure passed last week by the House. The House eliminated the Guam improvements from the bill by a 205 to 168 vote.

The Senate committee trend against development of Guam was not along party lines. Three of the five Republican Senators strongly favored harbor improvements in the far Pacific island. Three Democrats were for it, or "inclined" that way. Seven Democrats and one Republican were against it, or "inclined" against it. All reserved the right to change their views after hearings.

Davis, Byrd Reserve Views

Senators favoring the $5,000,000 authorization at least as an aid to navigation and transpacific air travel were Chairman Walsh, of Massachusetts; Tydings, of Maryland, and Ellender, of Louisiana (Democrats), and Hale, of Maine; Johnson, of California, and Gibson, of Vermont (Republicans).

Senators opposed, or "inclined" to be opposed, were Russell, of Georgia; Bone, of Washington; Gerry, of Rhode Island; Holt, of West Virginia; Andrews, of Florida; Gillette, of Iowa, and Lucas, of Illinois.

French, Tunisians Clash Near Italy's Libyan Border

Tunis, Feb. 28 (A).—Natives armed with "army rifles of a foreign country" engaged in a fatal clash with French gendarmes in southern Tunisia yesterday, police announced tonight.

Three natives were killed and one gendarme wounded in the encounter, which occurred between Gabes and Gafsa behind the French defense lines facing Italian Libya.

Reports here said the natives were from Italian Libya.

Salm Asks Son Support Him

Count Seeks $20,000 A Year From Oil Fortune of Boy, 14

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—A $20,000 annual personal allowance from his minor son's rich estate was sought today by the 53-year-old Count Ludwig Constantin Salm, who explained that recent political changes in Austria had left him without funds.

PETER SALM

The son is Peter Salm, 14, master of a $2,350,000 fortune left him by his grandfather, Standard Oil magnate Henry H. Rogers. Peter's mother is Millicent Rogers, who has remarried twice since she divorced the count.

Salm's petition said he "thoroughly believed it is the duty of a child possessing great wealth to contribute to the support of a parent "without funds or income."

COUNT SALM

The count said his mother was without funds and it would be incumbent upon him to support her.

In addition, Count Salm requested $10,000 a year to pay for visits by his son, who is with his mother. The count is allowed custody one week each month and an additonal month during the non-school period.

John Caldwell Meyers, co-guardian of Peter's estate, said he would oppose the petition.

Mexico Arrests Hitler's Friend As Nazi Spy

He, With Companion, Accused of Radioing Military Information

By International News Service.

Mexico City, Feb. 28.—Two alleged German spies, one of them said to be a friend of Reichsfuehrer Hitler, were arrested tonight by agents of the Mexican department of immigration, who charged they were sending military information to Germany by short-wave radio.

One of them was Baron Hans Heinrich Helleufer, a brother-in-law of Berlin's chief of police; the other, said to be Hitler's friend, was Paul Gardinsky.

Two to Be Deported

Steps were taken for the immediate deportation of the two suspects. Gardinsky, under guard, was placed aboard a train tonight for Vera Cruz, whence he will be shipped to Germany. Baron Helleufer, however, was believed to be held incommunicado by the Mexican authorities.

The German minister to Mexico, Baron Kurt von Collenberg, was reported to have intervened on Helleufer's behalf. He appealed to the Mexican foreign office, it is understood, that the suspect be given time to arrange his affairs before he is deported.

Radio Control Traced

Included in the information radioed to Germany by the alleged spies, according to police, were plans and soundings of Magdalena Bay on the West Coas of the peninsula of Lower California.

A Mexican government radio control traced the alleged spies' short-wave set to a spot near the Spanish cemetery in a suburb of Tacuba. Every night messages were transmitted in code to Berlin which decoding experts in the Ministry Gobernacion discovered contained military secrets.

Commons Votes Franco Recognition

Chamberlain Upheld

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 28.—The House of Commons tonight approved, by a vote of 344 to 137, Britain's recognition of the Nationalist Spanish government, after Prime Minister Chamberlain, in a blistering debate, declared he had received assurances from Gen. Franco that Spain would maintain her "sovereignty."

The vote of approval took the form of rejection of a Laborite motion of censure.

The caustic debate on the Labor motion centered about Opposition charges that the prime minister had "misled" Commons by not informing it in advance that formal recognition would be accorded the Burgos government.

Commons in Uproar

Just before the vote Commons was thrown into an uproar when the Labor leader, Clement Attlee, shouted that the prime minister "should tell this house the truth."

Government supporters shouted that Attlee by implication had called Chamberlain an "ugly name."

Answering Labor's charges that recognition of Franco amounted to a "betrayal of Spanish democracy," Sir Thomas Inskip, minister of dominions, in summing up, chided Labor with the assertion that when it was in power Britain had recognized four rebel regimes.

Even as the Commons debated, the Duke of Alba, Gen. Franco's representative in London since 1937, took official possession of the Spanish Embassy over which the Nationalist flag was hoisted.

Chamberlain obviously was angered as he rose to speak after the bitter personal attack by Attlee.

Attlee had called Chamberlain's statement yesterday announcing British recognition of Gen. Franco "a tissue of half truths which are worse than lies."

Misleading Statement Charged

The burden of the opposition attack was that Chamberlain had misled the House in a statement Thursday that no decision had been taken on recognition, but that meanwhile the prime minister had agreed with France to grant recognition.

Chamberlain said the Nationalist leader had given Britain "assurances against general reprisals for strictly political offenses." He said Britain "has received repeated assurances from Gen. Franco on all points raised" by Attlee.

These points included the questions of whether the Italian and German troops would leave Spain and whether Spain would come under control of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Answering Attlee's statement that the government should have demanded withdrawal of Italian and German troops from Spain before extending recognition, Chamberlain said:

"We know perfectly well it is quite impossible for us to exact such conditions unless we are prepared to go to war."

Anthony Eden, who resigned as foreign minister in opposition to Chamberlain's policy of dealing with Europe's dictators, supported him today. He said Britain should work with the French and United States governments.

Cardinals Urge Mother Seton As First American-Born Saint

By the United Press.

Vatican City, Feb. 28.—Denis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, and George Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago, today petitioned the highest officials of the Sacred College of Rites to approve canonization of Mother Elizabeth Seton, described as a distant relative of President Roosevelt, as the first American-born saint.

MOTHER SETON

The American cardinals pointed out in their recommendation that the beatification of Mother Seton has the full support of the Catholic hierarchy in the United States.

Mother Seton died at Emmitsburg, Md., in 1821 after founding the parochial school system in the United States.

The Rev. Salvatore M. Burgio, of Philadelphia, accompanying Cardinal Dougherty, has been appointed postulator of Mother Seton's case.

Father Burgio said President Roosevelt was related to the nun, a convert from the Protestant Church. She was born in New York City in 1774.

She was the founder of the American branch of the Order of the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul and was said by Father Burgio to have set up the first orphanage in America.

Star Sponsors Md. U. Team

JOAN BENNETT

Not every basketball squad has a sponsor like lovely Joan Bennett to "do or die" for, but Maryland University's team has.

The Hollywood actress accepted sponsorship of the Terp squad yesterday by telegraph.

"As an old side-center on St. Margaret's School team, I will be glad to sponsor the university team," the wire said.

Eddie Johnson, son of Walter "Big Train" Johnson and player on the team, was one of the boys who asked for Miss Bennett as sponsor.

Kansas City Indicts Judge And Gambler

Corruption in Work On Pendergast Ally's Office charged

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Feb. 28.—A crime-investigating county grand jury startled this political stronghold of Boss Tom Pendergast today with more than 90 indictments which included four against the presiding judge of the county court—then shut itself up and went back to work.

Those indicted by a grand jury which tackled its investigation after criticism of conditions here by Pendergast's Democratic enemy, Gov. Stark, included:

Presiding County Judge David E. Long on charges of corruptly allowing claims on the court in connection with improvements made on the headquarters of Justice of the Peace Gil P. Bourk, Pendergast ally. Judge Long was arraigned and released on bond.

J. W. Hostetter, former county judge and now occupant of the newly created post of supervisor of county institutions, on the same charges.

Charles Carrolla, Italian-born alien recently called "the big man" of gambling in Kansas City by Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves, on charges of operating a gambling place.

The indictment of Carrolla had been foreshadowed by a hearing conducted by Judge Allen C. Southern, arch foe of gambling and the man who called the grand jury. At that hearing, Carrolla was named as one who received as much as $2,500 in one month from one of the scores of alleged gambling places in Kansas City.

The indictments against the two county officials were based on ex-

Three Confess Kidnaping of Katz Youngster

New York, Feb. 28 (I.N.S.).—Police said the kidnaping of Mickey Katz was solved tonight when Charles Mitchell, the so-called intermediary; Joe Schwartz, 29, and his sister, Mrs. Nellie Resnick, 31, confessed.

Police said the two men lost about $7,000 on the horses during the last year, and said George Katz, father of the kidnaped child, was their bookmaker.

Kelly, Green Win Chicago Primaries

'Big Bill' Thompson Loses; Democrats Outnumber G. O. P. Voters 3 to 1

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Mayor Edward J. Kelly won a decisive victory in his fight for renomination by the Democratic Party tonight.

His opponent, State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, who had conducted a vigorous campaign to "smash the Kelly-Nash machine," conceded defeat after one-third of the heavy vote in the mayoralty primary elections had been counted.

Dwight H. Green, former U. S. district attorney who was drafted by the party command to lead the G. O. P. out of the political doldrums, earned the Republican nomination by a margin of almost four to one over William Hale (Big Bill) Thompson.

Thompson, who thrice was elected to the mayor's office, acknowledged his defeat before returns from half the precincts had been reported.

Prosecuted Al Capone

Green won wide notice as a "gang buster" when his prosecution led to the imprisonment of Al Capone and a half dozen of his henchmen. He will face Kelly in the election on April 4.

Unofficial reports from 3,580 of 3,643 precincts gave Kelly 592,213 and Courtney 309,776. In 3,596 precincts, Green had 209,867 and Thompson 61,731.

The mayoralty primaries, affording a new test of the power of the Kelly-Nash organization, a fresh measure of Republican strength and the first major 1939 sampling of popular political trends, brought an estimated 1,134,842 citizens to the polls.

It was indicated Democratic ballots outnumbered Republican votes by 900,000 to 280,000—a ratio of more than three to one.

Kelly Congratulated

Courtney telegraphed Kelly: "Congratulations on your victory. The voters have approved your administration."

Kelly stood on his six-year record. He ignored Courtney's charges that he had allowed the "greatest gambling syndicate in Chicago's history to flourish" and had permitted the tax rate to scale to an unprecedented peak. Kelly asserted he had given the city "more service at less cost" than any other Chicago mayor in modern times.

Green, just turned 42, and erstwhile Federal prosecutor, has declared "boss rule" can be eliminated here only by a shift to Republican leadership in the April election.

To Smash Machine

"The real fight has just begun," Green stated tonight. "We are organizing the drive to smash the Kelly-Nash machine in April. That drive is to break the alliance between crime and politics."

Republican chiefs here have declared the "machine" must be destroyed if the State's 29 electoral votes are to be swung to the Republican Presidential column in 1940.

National issues were involved only indirectly.

Green and Thompson had asserted a vote for a Democratic candidate would be, in effect, an indorsement of the foreign policies of the Roosevelt Administration—which, they contended, led toward war.

Mayor Kelly was indorsed by the executive committee of the Cook County (Chicago) unit of Labor's Non-Partisan League. The members said he stood "four square" behind the social and economic program of President Roosevelt.

'Mystery Man' Revealed in Life Of Slain Dancer

Los Angeles, Feb. 28 (I.N.S.).—Identity of a "mystery man" with whom Anya Sosoyeva, blonde Russian dancer, slain Friday night on the campus of Los Angeles City College, recently had associated, was revealed to police tonight.

The information was given by Beulah Stanley, roommate of the murdered woman, and bolstered reports that there recently had been a strange man in the life of the former Ziegfeld Follies dancer.

5 of Injured in Critical Condition; 4 in Front Vestibule Hurled Under Car and Crushed as It Leaps Rails

By the United Press.

Boston, Feb. 28.—Six persons, including four children, were killed and a score of passengers were injured, five critically, late today when a streetcar smashed into a tree after its brakes failed to hold on a slight down-grade and it jumped rain-spattered rails in Dorchester.

The dead were:

Dorrit Ruth Forman, 12; Diana Lax, 15; George A. Walton, 15, colored; Eleanor Schreiber, 20; Alice K. Sloane, 14, colored, and Alex Kozoe, 48, of Roxbury.

The operator of the car, Edward F. Hanely, 57, of Dorchester, slightly injured in the crash, was arrested tonight on a manslaughter charge and later released in $2,000 bail. He told police the brakes had slipped.

Crushed Beneath Car

Four of the victims, first thought to have been pedestrains, were standing in the front vestibule of the car, police said after an intensive investigation. As the car struck the tree, they were hurled through the doors, which opened with the impact, and were crushed beneath the car. The other two were killed inside the car.

Fifteen casualties were taken to City Hospital and all but five were sent to their homes after treatment. The five admitted to the hospital were said to be "critically injured." Five others were given first aid at the scene and sent to their homes.

Smashes Into Tree

The car, out-bound from Egleston Square station, was proceeding through Seaver street on a downgrade when it suddenly shot forward, brakes unable to stop its momentum, witnesses said. As it reached a sharp turn the car failed to negotiate the curve, leaped from the rails and smashed into a tree.

Police and volunteers, working in a downpour of icy rain, sought to break through the wreckage to passengers pinned inside the car. Others were passed through broken windows.

A milling throng stood in the rain as the victims were taken to nearby stores and administered first aid.

3,000 Left Waiting; Must Take Cars Off Streets

Nine thousand District motorists are nursing a collective headache today, 6,000 of whom stood in the rain yesterday to crawl under the wire for 1939 auto tags and 3,000 of whom didn't get to the traffic department in time to beat the deadline on old plates.

The 3,000 car owners without tags faced the problem of taking their autos off the streets until they could obtain the new plates or the possibility of a $10 fine plus $5 more for an impounding fee.

And a bit of aspirin is also in order for several hundred local residents who recently moved into Maryland and Virginia and must pay up to a half-year in registration taxes before they can buy new State licenses.

When 1938 District tags expired at midnight last night, there were many who found themselves in somewhat of a dilemma—faced with either putting away their cars for two weeks or forking over the purchase price of last year's Maryland or Virginia plates for a period ending March 15.

New tags in the two States will not be available until March 15 and old tags in the District were no good this morning—hence the quandary.

Queen Chats 'Like Home Folks' With N. Y. Woman, Met at Fair

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 28.—An 83-year-old American woman, Mrs. R. Cantor, of New York City, accidentally met the King and Queen of England today, kissed the Queen's hand, and then chatted with Their Majesties just as she would with "home folks."

MRS. CANTOR

"I got the biggest thrill of my life," she said afterward.

Mrs. Cantor said she was sitting in an office at the British Industries Fair, when King George and Queen Elizabeth entered. Everyone was asked to leave.

"But because I was old," she said, "and not very active, I was allowed to stay.

"When the Queen saw me, she held out her hand and I kissed it. Then she took my other hand and held both my hands while she talked.

"The Queen is so very sweet and dainty. I had rather expected her to be regally aloof.

"Oh, and the King! He was so young and unassuming. When he came over to join the Queen in speaking to me, it was the most genuine gesture you could imagine."

Mrs. Cantor said the Queen asked her what she thought of England and the fair.

"I was too overcome to remember what I answered," remarked Mrs. Cantor.

C. I. O. Joins Labor Peace Move, Names 3 for Parley

Lewis Appoints Self, Hillman, Murray to Meet A. F. L. Delegates

John L. Lewis, head of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, last night set the stage for a second attempt to negotiate a truce with the American Federation of Labor.

Hitherto silent regarding President Roosevelt's plea for labor unity, he announced in a letter to the President appointment of three men to confer with three already named by the A. F. of L.

The letter follows:

"My dear Mr. President: Complying with the request contained in your letter of February 23, I advise that the committee to represent the Congress of Industrial Organizations will consist of Mr. Philip Murray, Mr. Sidney Hillman and the undersigned."

No Comment

C. I. O. headquarters handed the letter to newspapermen without comment. William Green, president of the A. F. of L., in accepting the President's appeal for conferences, stipulated that the craft organization's structure must continue unimpaired.

Lewis will head the C. I. O. group. Murray is chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. Hillman is president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

The A. F. of L. conference committee consists of Daniel L. Tobin, Teamsters Union; Matthew Woll, Photo-Engravers, and Harry C. Bates, Bricklayers.

Lewis left to the White House or the A. F. of L. the decision as to when and where negotiations will begin.

Expectation was that the next step would be left to the President, who will return to the Capital Saturday from his trip to the Caribbean.

Choice of Self Surprising

Lewis' appointment of himself as head of the group was a surprise. Instead of remaining off the committee in order to be free to negotiate new contracts by the United Mine Workers, which he heads, he will concentrate on the effort to attain what the Administration regards as the major objective of labor.

The rival labor organizations attempted unsuccessfully to negotiate a truce in November and December, 1937.

At that time, seven C. I. O. representatives met three from the A. F. of L. Murray and Hillman were members of the C. I. O. group. Lewis was not.

Tobin and Bates were not members of the former A. F. of L. nego-

Brig. Gen. Cox, D.C. Guard Leader, Hurt in Auto Crash

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, who was chairman of the Traffic Safety Committee, suffered a deep cut over the left eye last night when the car he was driving collided with a streetcar at Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Maj. Edwin S. Bettelheim, guard officer, a passenger in the car, was uninjured.

Cox conducted the weekly guard drill before going to Walter Reed Hospital to have the cut stitched.

Over the Coffee By Harlan Miller

BY SIR WILLMOTT LEWIS
Correspondent of the London Times

"I hope," said Mr. Miller, as he threw open his column to me, "that you will not try to exclude the humorous touch entirely."

Sir Willmott

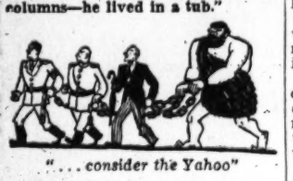
It is a curious request to make of an Englishman, who is supposed — for reasons which have never been clearly stated— to be highly refractory to all forms of humor. Mr. Miller should have asked Dr. Goebbels to act as guest - columnist. That eminent practitioner of malapropaganda and impropaganda would have given us something to laugh at.

* * * *

However, I took my perplexities to my old friend Theophilus Tyrwhitt, a recluse who was born with the gift of laughter and a sense that the world is mad. These advantages have enabled him to survive, with intelligence unimpaired, through a university education and a Ph. D. degree. Among the things which saved him was the discovery that a little common sense will do duty for a great deal of philosophy, but no amount of philosophy will make up for a failure in common sense.

* * * *

"You want me to help you," said Theophilus, "to put a mixture of humor (which you do not possess) and wisdom (which you cannot attain) into a column. Diogenes was better advised. He did not write columns—he lived in a tub."



". . . consider the Yahoo"

"And you," I replied, "live in Georgetown."

"As well here as anywhere," said my friend.

"In Georgetown the murmur of Washington is audible, but happily muted. As for the stridencies of the outer world, I do not hear them at all, and am content.

"I have inclined my earflap toward our great Capital, lo! these many years, and I perceive that it is still striving vainly to answer the question whether a chimaera, bombinating in a vacuum, can live on a diet of second intentions?"

* * * *

"I do not wish to write about Washington," said I. "My friend Mr. Miller can do that better than I. I want to write about the outer world."

"Then," said my friend, "Swift is your man, the Swift who traveled among the Yahoos, that race of brutes having the form and all the vices of man.

* * * *

"You should consider the nature of the Yahoo, and then ask yourself in what degree modern man resembles him.

"If you find that a resemblance exists, as you will, you should then debate by what miracle of chance, or what possible rebirth of intelligence, man's rulers can be prevented from leading him through catastrophe to the edge of ruin—from world war to class war to race war."

"I find you in a perverse mood," said I.

". . . from chaos and a rib"

"No," said Theophilus. "I am trying to tell you that the outer world—which stops at the confines of Georgetown—is striving now, as always, to change the shape of a shadow without touching its object, that object being the savage nature of man. Science has given the modern savage—which is all of us—tools which he cannot be trusted to use for his own good. The last half-century proves that beyond denial."

"Well," said I, "there may be a sort of dyspeptic wisdom in what you say, but where is the humor I want?"

* * * *

"Here it is in a parable," Theophilus rejoined. "Each of three men—doctor, engineer and economist—contended that his occupation came first in recorded history.

"'Is not woman a rib taken from Adam's side, and does not this give my craft priority?' asked the doctor.

"'Immemorially before that,' said the engineer, 'the world was fashioned out of chaos—the greatest engineering feat of all time.'"

The economist smiled complacently and tapped his bosom.

"'But who made the chaos?' he asked."

* * * *

Theophilus, who loathes economists, grinned impishly.

"The economist may be right," he said. "But, at any rate, he encourages me to say what I have been waiting for many years to say—that we have chaos, but perhaps not yet enough to make a world."

Tomorrow's guest columnist will be Senator Robert A. Taft.

State Control Of U. S. School ProjectsSought

Federal System Declared a Peril By School Heads

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Feb. 28.—Transfers to the States of control and administration of educational activities performed by the Works Progress Administration, the National Youth Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps was demanded tonight by the committee on resolutions of the American Association of School Administrators.

The resolution charged the Administration with attempting to set up "two public school systems in this country, one controlled by Washington and the other controlled by the localities and the States." It warned that these duplications of school functions "not only result in needless duplication, waste and inefficiency but are particularly dangerous at a time when authoritarianism and regimentation are gaining the upper hand in so many countries."

"This danger comes from the reaction of various Federal educational agencies which, it is true, perform indispensable services," the resolution continued. "Federal support for these agencies is essential but Federal control is neither necessary nor desirable. . . . Local and State control is one of the strongest supports of our civil liberties and of intellectual freedom."

The resolution also demanded that all educational activities scattered throughout the executive branch of the Federal Government be consolidated in the United States Offices of Education, a division of the Department of the Interior, to eliminate "confusion and waste of public funds."

The resolution will be presented to the convention tomorrow. It was indicated it would find no concerted opposition.

New Plan Drafted To Distribute Surpluses to Needy

By the Associated Press.

Agriculture Department officials said yesterday they were drafting a plan to distribute surplus farm products to relief families through private wholesale and retail establishments.

The plan, they added, probably would be inaugurated on an experimental basis in six large cities within six weeks.

Instead of going to Government-operated relief stores to get surplus commodities now distributed free, relief clients would get them from their regular grocers. Officials withheld details.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Feb. 28.—Two cross-section surveys of national sentiment just completed by the American Institute indicate that the dominant pull of public opinion today is much more toward increasing Federal control over labor unions than toward increasing Federal control over business corporations.

GALLUP.

With the Government becoming more and more of a factor in the economic life of the Nation, the majority of voters apparently believe, according to the survey, that if business is subject to Government supervision, labor unions should not be given a free rein.

The expression of sentiment was on the issue of Federal licensing. Senators Borah and O'Mahoney have for many months advocated a law requiring corporations doing interstate business to take out a license with the Federal Government. The Institute put this issue to a vote in its survey and, for comparison, tested sentiment on licensing labor unions as well.

The results show that whereas a small majority favor corporation licenses, an overwhelming majority favor licenses for labor unions.

The first question asked:

"Do you think all companies doing business in more than one State should be required to get a license from the United States Government?"

The vote was:

Yes	57%
No	43

The second question asked:

"Do you think every labor union should be required to take out a license from the Federal Government?"

The vote was:

Yes	75%
No	25

The predominant comment of voters on this issue was that "licenses would enable the Government to regulate unions more effectively."

It seems clear from the vote on the two questions that the public puts much more emphasis on controlling labor unions at this time than on controlling business. This fact is also borne out by earlier Institute studies which show that the public thinks the Roosevelt Administration has been too friendly toward labor unions and not friendly enough toward business.

In view of this public attitude, it seems likely that the trend of sentiment will be more in the direction of legislation to amend the Wagner labor act and to provide a clearer definition of labor's responsibilities than toward legislation for stricter regulation of business.

A contrast was found between the opinions of upper and lower income groups on licensing corporations. Almost two-thirds of voters in the upper income group voted against corporation licensing, whereas more than two-thirds in the lower income group voted for it.

But, significantly, no such contrast was found in the vote on licensing labor unions. This proposal was approved by almost identical majorities in all income groups—an indication of how widespread sentiment is for some sort of labor union control.

	License Corporations? Yes	No
Upper income group	38%	62%
Middle income group	55	45
Lower income group	69	31

	License Labor Unions? Yes	No
Upper income group	76%	24%
Middle income group	73	27
Lower income group	72	28

No important difference was found in the vote by parties on the labor union question, both Democrats and Republicans favoring licenses by more than 70 per cent. But voters in the two parties do not agree on licensing corporations. Democrats were 3 to 2 in favor of the idea, whereas Republicans were 3 to 2 opposed.

Shoe Man Pleads Guilty, Fined $1,500 in First Wage-Hour Case

Promises Restitution to Raise Pay of 300 Workers to 25 Cents an Hour; One Received Only $2.38 Per Week

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Feb. 28.—Pleas of guilty and imposition of fines totaling $1,500 today terminated suddenly the Federal Government's first criminal prosecution for violation of the wage-hour law.

The guilty pleas were entered in behalf of Brown Contract Stitching, Inc., a Lawrence shoe company, and Nathan Brown, treasurer and general manager, to four Federal indictments charging failure to pay a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour, falsification of records, failure to keep required records and the placing in interstate commerce of goods produced under those conditions.

On each indictment, Federal Judge Elisha H. Brewster imposed a $1,000 fine on Brown and a $500 fine on the company, but he suspended payment of penalties for three of the four violations after counsel advised the court restitution would be made to underpaid employes.

Joseph E. Brill, chief of the wage-hour unit of the Department of Justice, who prepared the Government's case, asked that Brown and the company be fined $1,000 each, but Judge Brewster said the penalty imposed would "show it had cost more than $2,000 to play with fire," which should be "sufficient to discourage others."

Brill presented evidence that one young woman employe received only $2.64 for a week's work and another $2.38. He estimated the company had saved $700 to $1,000 by evading the wage-hour act. The company employs 300 persons.

Other Firms Investigated

Another Lawrence shoe company is under Federal investigation and Federal officers indicated other manufacturers in this region would come under their scrutiny.

"The Government wants manufacturers to know the act is being enforced and that it is unprofitable to violate it," Brill declared.

The case was described by Thomas H. Eliot, New England director of the Wage and Hour Division of the Labor Department as the "first step in routine enforcement of the wage and hour law in New England."

Lawyers' Guild Chief Spurns All Dictators

Says Jackson, Arnold, Frank Agree With Him In Stressing Democracy

Opposition by the National Lawyers' Guild to any form of dictatorship, whether Communist or Fascist, was affirmed here yesterday by its president, Judge John Gutknecht, of Chicago. He denied any prominent Government officials have resigned from the organization.

Solicitor General Robert Jackson, Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold and Jerome Frank, member of the Securities Exchange Commission, are among lawyers Judge Gutknecht described as "emphatic in stating their desire that the guild continue to function as a force for liberalism."

Frank and Arnold last week were listed by Justice Ferdinand Pecora, of the New York State Supreme Court, as members of a bloc resigning with him as a protest against Communist influence in the guild. Pecora later said he would remain a member if he were satisfied the guild would not be used as a medium for promoting any political creed incompatible with American democracy.

Gutknecht's statement, in which he said Jackson, Arnold and Frank concurred with him, stressed the guild's devotion to democracy and asserted that "democracy in America today is intertwined with retention of the profit system."

Production Cost Farm Bill Urged At House Hearing

By the Associated Press.

Witnesses from widely separated parts of the country asked the House Agriculture Committee yesterday to approve a cost-of-production farm bill as a substitute for the present farm program.

G. S. Hagans, Urbana Ohio, president of the National Farmers Guild, asserted that the program had not brought the results expected, and suggested that if farmers could get back their cost, "the value of our work would remain with us, rather than go to imports" of foreign nations.

Currency Pact Unlikely, Says Morgenthau

House Committee Told U. S. Continues To Seek Money Basis

Secretary Morgenthau told the House Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee yesterday the Treasury had sought unsuccessfully to find a basis for an international currency-stabilization agreement.

"If the principal commercial nations would agree to fix a stable basis for their currencies," he declared, "nothing would be more helpful to business.

"Unfortunately, that prospect seems to be remote. But we have been working on it all the time, and if there should be any slight inclination on the part of the leading commercial powers to join in such an undertaking, I will drop whatever I am doing and meet them more than halfway."

Highlight of Testimony

This disclosure was the highlight of Morgenthau's testimony before the committee in support of the Somers bill to renew the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, the power to cut the gold content of the dollar to 50 per cent, and the authority to buy newly mined domestic silver at a premium price. All expire June 30.

Other developments relating to Administration monetary policy were:

The House, by a vote of 155 to 135, rejected a proposal by Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, to slash $100,000 from a $731,250 appropriation for expenses of the Bureau of the Mint in carrying out the silver purchase and gold reserve acts. The proposal was essentially an attack on the Treasury silver purchase program.

Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, called for an investigation of the Administration's gold purchase policy, declaring it constituted a subsidy to foreign governments.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, said he would support legislation to end the President's authority to alter the value of the dollar and to issue outright $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks.

Calls Fund a "Shock Absorber"

Morgenthau, at the hearing, withdrew the cloak of secrecy from stabilization fund operations. He furnished committee members with detailed information concerning the assets of the fund, as well as the nature of its operations.

He declared the fund had proved a "shock absorber" to American business during the Czecho-Slovakian crisis last September. It is essential to continue it, he said, since a "recurrence of international crises is probable."

Recalling the violent flight of capital from England last September, he said that "had there been no stabilization fund to co-operate with the other funds, the dollar exchange would have fluctuated so violently as to disrupt our trade."

"International monetary chaos might have ensued," he added.

It is essential, he declared, that the President's power to reduce still further the gold content of the dollar (It was cut in 1934 to 59.06 per cent of its former value) be continued as a defensive weapon in case one of the large commercial nations "should be so foolish as to start a currency war."

No Aims at Devaluation

Hereafter, he said, the audit of the stabilization fund will be made public once a year.

The Administration, he emphasized, has no intention of further devaluing the dollar except as a protective measure in case of an international currency war.

Assets of the stabilization fund on December 31, he disclosed, totaled $2,062,232,431, including a profit on transactions of $12,445,297. Due to heavy operations last September and later, the profit had increased by $2,570,850 in the last half of 1938.

The fund held gold to the credit of the Bank of China amounting to $48,838,340, built up through silver purchases from that country. Besides $1,800,000,000 in gold which has never been used in currency stabilization operations, it held $80,410,864 in gold and a special account and $77,599,972 in cash.

Investments by the fund in Government bonds totaled $5,026,562. Administrative expenses totaled $784,653.

Shanley Asserts House Majority Vital to Reforms

Retention of the Democratic House majority is vital to refine and consolidate reforms of the New Deal, Representative James A. Shanley, of Connecticut, told the Connecticut Democrats' Club of Washington last night.

Recalling his own close shave in last fall's elections, he said if it hadn't been for a party machine he probably would not have been returned to Washington. "A machine when well run benefits the poor man because it gets out all the vote," he stated.

Shanley labeled House Republicans "Charlie McCarthys without a program."

Rep. Gavagan Calls Anderson Ban Fascistic

D. A. R. Reminded Of 'Colored Patriot's' Role in History

Refusal to lease Constitution Hall for a concert by Marian Anderson, colored contralto, smacks of "Nazi and Fascist philosophy," Representative Joseph A. Gavagan (Democrat), of New York City, charged yesterday.

Gavagan, whose constituency includes part of Harlem, wrote Mrs. Henry A. Robert, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which owns Constitution Hall, "I assume, of course, that the only possible reason for your organization's refusal is Miss Anderson's color."

"Perhaps the purposes and principles of the D. A. R. have changed and today the association is ready to foster and maintain the principles of the Fuehrer and Il Duce," he said. "If this assumption be correct, I suggest that you immediately take all means available to remove from our history books the name of Crispus Attucks. He was a Negro who gave his life in Boston Common that American democracy might live."

Two Dates Open, Manager Says

Meanwhile, in New York City, S. Hurok, Miss Anderson's manager, denied a statement by Mrs. Frank L. Mason, D. A. R. registrar general, that the noted colored singer was banned from Constitution Hall only because it already had been reserved for the National Symphony Orchestra April 9.

"We learned on good authority," Hurok said, "that April 8 and 10 were open to 'white artists.' We applied for either of those dates and were again turned down."

"No comment" was the response of Frederick Hand, manager of the hall, when asked last night whether April 8 and 10 were open dates.

D. A. R. officials, according to the United Press, today will receive by mail a brief but pointed note of resignation from Mrs. Roosevelt, who is reported to have quit in indignation over the Anderson incident.

School Board to Get Protest

Officers of the organization continued to maintain they had no knowledge of the First Lady's withdrawal. "I wish when Mrs. Roosevelt resigns from an organibzation she would give the name," said Mrs. Edith Edwards, assistant secretary to the president general. "It would save this organization and this office a great deal of time and trouble."

More than 1,000 citizens are expected to appear today before the Board of Education meeting at Franklin School to protest the board's refusal to permit Miss Anderson to sing in Central High School auditorium.

Florida Woods Soon to Fill With People on High Trapezes

Artists Converge in Next Two Weeks For Practice at Winter Quarters Before Circus Takes to Road April 1

By Inez Robb.

(Copyright, 1939, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Distributed by International News Service.

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 28.—Not one flaming billboard proclaims that this is the community where the circus spends the winter.

ROBB

It requires two natives, a road map and, at long last, a neatly lettered sign to point out the headquarters of Ringling Bros. Barnum and Bailey. There are no barkers, no shills, no sawdust and no spangles on the 700 acres that comprise the circus winter quarters.

Even that pungent aroma, the circus smell, is lost in the piny woods. Well, almost! Here the circus takes its hair down for five months out of the year and relaxes under a warm winter sun. The performers scatter to the four winds.

Here there is no big top. The hundreds of animals, ranging from the ferocious beasts of the impenetrable jungle to fat work horses, are housed in barns and sheds, while a couple of pet zebras and two tame elephants roam the back woods.

Within another 10 days, visitors can gape at men and women on the high trapeze, flying through the Florida ether with the greatest of ease. The artistes will have converged for practice before the circus takes to the road April 1.

"We set up trapezes, flying rings, tight wires, all sorts of paraphernalia out-of-doors, and everyone practices in full view of the visitors," John Ringling North, president of the circus, explained today. "The woods are full of people on trapezes by the middle of March."

Something I never knew till now about the circus is the fact that the big top itself is new every year. So is every other piece of canvas used about the circus.

Every season the circus is newly clothed from head to foot. The costumes for its hundreds of performers are made by the same people who costume the most pretentious of Broadway shows. The man who owns a circus pays and pays and pays.

"You couldn't use an elephant, could you?" hopefully asked North, as we inspected his herd. The herd now numbers 75, which is 30 more than the circus takes on tour.

An elephant is the most expensive hay-burner alive. Even a small one eats a bale per day.

"With hay at $22 a ton, it mounts up," said North.

49 in Mine a Week To Evacuate With $14,000 Back Pay

Hazleton, Pa., Feb. 28 (AP).—Miners in the nearby Oneida coal mine who have been selfentombed for a week in protest against nonpayment of back wages tonight decided to return to the surface.

Company officials took $14,000 in cash to the mine tonight, wages due the men February 20. Altogether, the miners claim, nearly $66,000 has been due them in wages more than a year.

The sit-down protest began a week ago when 62 miners refused to come to the surface. Since then illness, caused by cold and dampness, depleted their ranks to 49.

After 20 Years Railroad Man Gets Day Job

If there is a happier man in Washington this morning than W. D. Robertson, who was retired from the B. & O. yesterday on his sixty-ninth birthday, it's J. F. Nicholson—who succeeds him.

Robertson has been waiting for the time he could give his whole attention to gardening and chicken-raising—and Nicholson has been waiting 20 years for a daytime job.

"Everybody's happy," sang the railroaders who crowded into the B. & O. Terminal tower down by the Union Station to present Robertson wiar a going-away gift and wish him "trains in his dreams."

"I'll be back to see the boys, but I'm glad to go," Robertson said. "It's good to get out of harness. I'm going to knock off 30 minutes early in celebration."

He has been with the B. & O. as telegrapher for 45 years. Thirty of them he has spent in the tower, letting the trains go by. Fifty-three passenger trains, twelve freights and any number of yard engines he has routed in and out of the Washington railroad yards daily.

A native of Amelia County, Va., Robertson "picked up" telegraphy hanging around railway stations of the Norfolk and Western as a boy.

He is the father of six children, two of whom still make their home with him and his wife at Gaithersburg, Md., where the gardening and chicken raising soon will get under way.

D. C. Firearms Registration Sought in Bill

Measure Aimed at Gangsters Being Drafted by Seal

Compulsory registration of all firearms held by local residents and stringent measures to prevent guns from falling into the hands of gangsters will be embodied in a bill now being prepared by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, it was learned yesterday.

It was believed action by the District officials resulted from the robbery last year of Representative William T. Schulte, Democrat of Indiana, who at the time recommended more stringent laws to prevent the purchase of guns.

Under the new legislation any person desiring to purchase a gun, sawed-off shotgun, machine gun, or other weapons which may be concealed would have to first obtain permission from the superintendent of police.

At present the purchaser first approaches the dealer, who in turn sends the request to the police department for approval or disapproval.

Iowa Snowbound; Fall Heaviest In Half-Century

Chicago, Feb. 28 (I.N.S.).—In a furious new outburst winter sent snowstorms and blizzards sweeping over large sections of the Midwest, Southwest and Rocky Mountain regions today and buried Iowa under one of its heaviest snows in more than half a century.

The skies had cleared tonight over Iowa and adjoining States but snow depths on the level ranged from 6 to 18 inches, with practically all highways blocked.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach often pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in no time and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

Zionists Reject Rule by Arabs, Quit Parley

Indicate They Won't Return Until There Is A New Palestine Plan

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Feb. 28.—Jewish delegates to the Palestine Round Table Conference "walked out" on their British hosts today after a 1½-hour "informal" conversation.

They indicated tonight they would not come back until Colonial Secretary MacDonald can produce either prospects of fundamental changes in his suggested prescription for peace in the Holy Land or hope of a new plan that will, in the Jewish view, guarantee against Arab domination of Palestine.

Today's meeting between the British and the Jews was the last desperate attempt to keep negotiations moving.

The Jews concluded the present series of "formal" talks Monday, when they unconditionally rejected the British plan for giving both Arabs and Jews a proportional voice in the Palestinian government which would have meant Arab supremacy, and the eventual establishment of an independent state in which Arabs could politically outshout their Jewish neighbors as a constitutional right.

Anti-British Demonstration

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, Feb. 28.—Authorities imposed a 24-hour curfew on the Jewish quarters of the Holy City today following anti-British demonstrations by Jews aroused over reports that Palestine would be made an independent Arab state.

Blood continued to flow in Palestine's three-cornered British-Arab-Jewish strife as British troops, fighting terrorism, killed 16 Arabs in a battle with an armed band on Palestine's northern frontier.

Speakers at a protest meeting sponsored by the National Council of Palestine Jews condemned what they termed "British treachery" and declared "They can never take the homeland from the Jews."

Strike Call Authorized

A resolution submitted to the assembly would authorize the council to call a general strike at its discretion. This was interpreted as a warning that the Jews intended to resist actively any attempt to create an Arab state.

Troops and police combed trouble zones to prevent a recurrence of yesterday's bloody bombings and gunplay, in which 32 persons were killed and 54 wounded.

Police Ordered To Halt Anti-Nazi Riots in Warsaw

Warsaw, Feb. 28 (AP).—Orders for quick action to halt demonstrations against Germany were given Warsaw police tonight after Warsaw University and Polytechnic School students paraded shouting "down with Hitler!" "down with the Germans!" and "we want a change in foreign policy!"

The Senate of the Nazified free city of Danzig suspended lectures at the Danzig Polytechnic School on demand of the Polish government. There have been numerous clashes between Polish and German students at the school.

tiating committee. Tobin is regarded as a supporter of the harmony movement.

Reports were that Lewis had delayed acceptance until yesterday because he was irked by conditions laid down by Green. The latter announced acceptance last Saturday, a few hours after the President's appeal was made public.

Widespread belief exists that the most that can be expected is an armistice. Neither side has indicated any change in policy since the peace talks 15 months ago.

Miss Perkins May Direct

Secretary of Labor Perkins has taken a leading part in laying the groundwork for the President's appeal. Initial steps in the new negotiations may be under her direction.

In letters to Lewis and Green, the President asked for a "just peace with honor," and expressed the hope that this could be achieved "within the early months of the new year."

He told the rival labor leaders that their quarrel was a deterrent to recovery and that the desire for peace is widespread in the rank and file of labor.

Miss Perkins and Green declined to comment on Lewis' reply.

Mars Needn't Fear Monsters From Earth, Says Savant

The "Monsters From Mars" scare has been analyzed by Dr. F. R. Moulton, permanent secretary of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and he has found that if the Martians have the same problem in reaching the earth men on earth would have in reaching Mars, no one has any reason to worry about extraplanetary visitors. After considering various methods of constructing a space vessel and shooting it off the earth, he finds it impractical to get a 20-foot metal sphere moving at the required speed of more than 7 miles a second. Falling back on the rocket principle, he calculates that the 10-ton rocket would have to carry an initial load of fuel equivalent to 16,000 tons of coal, which, he states in the current Scientific Monthly, indicates the impossibility of getting a "monster" from one planet to another.

G-Man Links Spy Suspect to Soviet Embassy

Diplomats Advised Gorin After Arrest, Witness Testifies

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.—The Government's long-awaited attempt to prove that Moscow pulled the strings of a plot to steal United States naval secrets materialized in Federal court today when a witness testified Soviet diplomatic agents gave advice to Mikhail Gorin after his arrest.

A Federal agent testified that Gorin, western manager of Soviet Intourist Travel Bureau, Inc., telephoned the Russian Embassy in Washington five times the night of his arrest and later received in jail a counselor from the Soviet Consulate.

The witness, G. B. Dierst, F. B. I. agent, said Gorin pleaded he required "authorization" from his "superior" in Washington before he could submit to questioning. Gorin, his blonde wife, Natasha, and Hafis Salich, Russian-born former naval intelligence attache at San Pedro, are on trial before Federal Judge Ralph E. Jenney. They are charged with two counts of espionage and one of conspiracy, which carry a possible maximum penalty of 42 years in prison.

Dierst and two other witnesses testified:

That Salich admitted selling naval secrets to Gorin, but justified his act by saying that all the information he betrayed concerned activities of Japan, the "mutual enemy" of Soviet Russia and the United States.

That the Soviet vice consul specifically instructed Gorin not to discuss his arrest and promised that "we'll make no statement about the papers found in your suit." That reference was to an alleged incriminating letter found in Gorin's suit by a Hollywood cleaner who turned it over to police.

Gorin's attorney, Isaac Pacht, moved to strike the testimony on the ground the conversation was not an admission of conspiracy.

United States District Attorney Benjamin Harrison disagreed, declaring, "our contention is that these conversations are an admission that Gorin was connected with a foreign government and he was obtaining information for it." The court will rule on the point later.

In cross-examination, Dierst admitted that the Washington person with whom Gorin conversed probably was Serge Oumansky, Charge d'Affaires, and not the ambassador, Alexander Troyanovsky, who reportedly was out of the country.

U. S. First Line of Defense Lies In Britain, France, Logan Says

Senate Debates Extent to Which Aid Given to European Democracies Can Prevent or Encourage War

The specter of another World War and the extent to which aid given by the United States to democracies can prevent or encourage it aroused heated debate in the Senate yesterday as consideration of the special defense bill continued.

Then, timing appearance at the height of the foreign policy debate, 12 members of the "isolation bloc" proposed an amendment to the Constitution requiring a popular referendum before the United States could go to war. The resolution proposes that, except in case of an attack upon the United States or its territorial possessions, "or by any non-American nation against any country in the Western Hemisphere," the sole power to declare war or engage in warfare overseas shall be by referendum of the people.

In the foreign policy debate itself, Senator Logan (Democrat) Kentucky, declared that tension is lessening in Europe as the result of American armament and the prospect that England and France may obtain arms from the United States. He said "Britain and France are our first line of defense. If we aid in arming them we aid ourselves."

"Temporary Truce" Abroad

From an opponent of the bill, Senator Clark (Democrat), Idaho, came a warning that peace in Europe is "but a temporary truce "and that this Nation should "mind its own business and stay out of it." Another opponent, Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, disagreed, with Clarke's prediction, declaring there will be "no war this year or next unless the United States eggs on and encourages it and shows a disposition to finance and join it."

Most of the oratory came from critics of the measure, although Administration supporters hammered back at opponents with intermittent questions and sharp attacks.

Immediately upon introduction of the war referendum resolution, Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared his opposition. The measure was defeated in the House last year by a small margin. The State Department exercised pressure to defeat the plan, arguing it would tie the hands of the Administration at critical periods when the knowledge abroad that the United States would not act might encourage aggressors.

Up to the People

"When democracy and peace are either destroyed or threatened in large portions of the world," Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, declared in a statement, "it is imperative that the destiny of our own Nation be decided by the people themselves.

"If the nations of Europe or Asia wage war upon one another, it is essential that the policy of the United States shall have the expressed support of our citizens. The referendum will keep us from waging an aggressive war on foreign soil without consulting the people first, but it will not delay or prevent the defense of the United States it possessions or any part of North or South America."

Sponsors of the deferendum were Senators Bone, of Washington; Clark, of Idaho; Clark, of Missouri; Donahey, of Ohio; Murray and Wheeler, of Montana, Democrats; Capper, of Kansas; Frazier and Nye, of North Dakota, Republicans; La Follette, of Wisconsin, Progressive, and Lundeen and Shipstead, of Minnesota, Farmer-Laborites.

"Jitterism," Says Borah

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, whose part in the debate so far has been confined mainly to questions, declared off the floor that the defense bill is "just a lot of bluff and jitterism." The veteran "isolationist" told reporters that 6,000-plane strength provided in the bill would give the Army more planes than "they can use."

"If it weren't for a bad case of jitters," Borah added, "the Administration never would have suggested that we decorate that sand dune on the other side of the Pacific."

Borah referred to the Administration proposal that naval aviation facilities be provided at Guam, a plan rejected by the House.

Army Bill in House

Meanwhile, consideration of other phases of the defense program will move forward today. The House will take up a $520,00,000 Army supply bill, which will provide 850 new planes, to bring the Air Corps up to its present goal of 2,320 airplanes and provide a start on the new 6,000 total authorized in the emergency bill.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee will take up the Administration measure to provide 12 new naval air bases in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans at a cost of $43,000,000. The group will consider whether to restore the proposed base at Guam, eliminated by the House last week.

The Navy Department yesterday awarded three contracts totaling $24,000,000 for armor plate for warships under construction. The largest order went to Bethlehem Steel Corporation, with Midvale Steel and Carnegie-Illinois receiving smaller orders.

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, announced that due to opposition from labor circles, Army officials had agreed to drop an amendment exempting "educational orders" for war materials authorized in the defense bill from various labor restrictions.

Senator Clark, of Idaho, in his maiden speech before the Senate, said "America doesn't want war, but war can come again in the twinkling of an eye."

Foresees Another War

"It is a matter of months, at most a year or two, before Europe will again be plunged into the most bloody conflict the world has ever known," he declared. Then every means of propaganda will begin to get us in. A little martial music and once more the war drums will beat a tattoo."

To prevent such a catastrophe, the youthful Idahoan proposed that the United States (1) "mind our own business, which means not distinguishing between nations;" (2) "declare as our fixed policy that never again will one American boy's life be lost to protect one American dollar invested abroad;" (3) "American merchant vessels be prohibited from flying the American flag in foreign waters."

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, took the floor to answer Clark's speech, declaring he saw no connection between his proposals and the defense program. Quoting Gen. Pershing as stating that no American-made airplane reached the front in the World War, Lee said the purpose of the bill is to have planes on hand and the capacity to build them in an emergency.

Senator Nye declared he was for "defense adequate to repel an attack on this hemisphere," but not for defense forces based on guaranteeing our commerce "freedom of the seas." He said he was for an increase in air strength, but not as much as provided in the bill.

"Attack Years Away"

"The truth is that if Italy, Japan and Germany are successful in Europe and Asia," he continued, "it will be years and years before any one of them could leave their own front yard to attack the United States."

Administration supporters broke into Nye's long speech repeatedly to challenge his statements. Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, declared that he was "tired" of hearing Nye "raising scarecrows and ghosts behind the barn" about the Administration wanting to "police the world," declaring that no one in authority has ever proposed such a move.

Majority Leader Barkley and Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, objected to a number of charges made by Nye regarding the sale of military planes to France. Minton countered the latter's statement that Army officials were "enraged" over the sale with a declaration that the Army protest was merely pro forma, and flatly denied that the President had ordered them to make the sale as Nye contended.

penditures of approximately $9,800 last spring and summer by the County Court for remodeling and repairing Bourk's headquarters, owned by two sons of Judge Long and rented by the county.

Carrolla and two brothers, Frank and John, appeared voluntarily to plead not guilty to the gambling indictments while deputies were searching for them. Others to appear on the same charges included Lewis and Katherine Rabinowitz, Thomas Lacoco, William Englander and Dominic Bimaggio.

Was Aide of Lazia

Carrolla was the right-hand man of John Lazia, one-time lieutenant of Pendergast's North Side organization, when gangsters ambushed and killed Lazia in 1934.

Judge Reeves, in calling a Federal grand jury, said he would have it determine if gamblers were deriving huge incomes which were escaping taxation.

Bonds for those charged with gambling violations today ranged up to $10,500.

Fifty of the indictments were signed by representatives of State's Attorney General Roy McKittrick.

At the outset of the investigation, McKittrick ignored the proceedings, charging Gov. Stark and Judge Southern had endeavored to take over the office of attorney general in seeking a special investigator.

County Prosecutor W. W. Graves had halted proceedings temporarily by charging they were illegal. The State Supreme Court denied Graves a writ of prohibition but specified he had the right along with McKittrick to appear before the grand jruy. McKittrick later appeared but Graves became ill. Assistants from his office, however, have participated.

Navy Asks Curb On Red Agents In Services

Edison Urges Congress To Halt Influences That Disrupts Morale

Concerned over increasing activities of Communists and other agencies in distributing subversive literature in the Army and Navy, the Navy Department yesterday urged Congress to enact a law to curb operations of subversive agents.

In a letter to Speaker Bankhead, Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison said most of the activities originated from Communists and have been directed toward disrupting morale and promoting disobedience.

Measure Drafted

Edison revealed a measure had been drafted providing for fines of $1,000 and two years' imprisonment on conviction of agents inciting disobedience of military orders or regulations.

"Literature of a nature subversive to the Government has been distributed in increasing quantities in recent years to personnel of the Army and Navy," Edison wrote.

"Existing law is inadequate to curb this propaganda.

"The pamphlets and leaflets are carefully worded to avoid the insurrections and sedition provisions of the criminal code."

Provides Free Speech

"The proposed legislation, it is believed," Edison wrote, "will protect the military and naval forces from the contaminating influence which has as its ultimate object the overthrow of our Government by force. It does not infringe upon the rights of free speech or a free press."

Senate Committee Split on Guam Defense; Walsh Proposes Separate Bill for Outpost

Guam

(Democrats), and Barbour, of New Jersey (Republicans).

Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, was out of town. Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, and Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, reserved their views.

Chairman Walsh said he will discuss the controversial issue in executive session with his committee this morning, and probably later will propose a separate measure.

"I think it was a mistake in the first place to attach it to the Navy base bill," Walsh said. "As part of the national defense program, some viewed it as an offensive gesture toward Japan, which it never was intended to be. I think that, and what propagandists have called a 'bellicose' attitude, accounted for its defeat in the House. Submitted separately as an intended part of our harbor and airway developments, I think the reception may be different."

Project Inconsistent

Several Senators tentatively opposing the item, including Gerry, Andrews and Lucas, said they considered improvements on the island inconsistent with this country's projected withdrawal from the Philippines in 1946, and declared the question of Philippine evacuation should be finally determined before defense lines were moved farther west.

Some who favored the authorization, including Senator Gibson, former chairman of the House Territories Committee, favored going beyond ordinary civil improvements and actually "fortifying" the island.

"For strategic reasons we should fortify it," said Gibson. "It has been fortified before, without any protests from Japan. It is our island and its 23,000 inhabitants have been loyal to the United States for 30 years. It is no business of Japan's what we do there."

Other comment of Senate committee members:

Senator Gillette—"We have a policy for preparedness for defense, with a strategic line in the Pacific from Panama to Pearl Harbor to the Aleutians. It would be a radical change in that policy to extend the line 1,400 miles westward to Guam. Everybody knows we can't defend Guam."

Johnson Favors Project

Senator Johnson—"I am inclined to be for it. I don't think we should ever let another nation tell us what we should do in matters of defense."

Senator Gerry—"I am at present not inclined to be for the Guam authorization. The whole question is tied up with what we finally decide to do in the Philippines, and whether our connection there is severed."

Senator Ellender—"I am 100 per cent for development of Guam. We are told that it is necessary for national defense and that should be enough."

Senator Lucas—"My present inclination is to vote against it. We would be sticking our neck way out to provoke Japan. Another consideration is the cost. This wouldn't stop at $5,000,000—it would mean more than $150,000,00 before we got through."

Senator Andrews—"I think it would be all right to proceed with civil improvements there if we should decide to keep the Philippines. But I would not be for it otherwise."

Bone Is Opposed

Senator Bone—"I am opposed to it because the island is untenable from the standpoint of defense . . . If we are going to extend our defense lines to the Orient, Singapore would be a better base than Guam."

Senator Tydings—"I shall want to get all the facts at the hearings, but I am now inclined to be for it."

Senator Barbour—"If the vote were taken now, I think I would be against it, but I reserve the right to change. I think this would be needlessly provocative."

Senator Russell—"Guam is not in the House bill and I think the Senate should do nothing about it. I am opposed to handling it in a separate measure unless it is taken away from the Navy."

Byrd Undecided

Senator Byrd—"I am for adequate defense, but I haven't made up my mind on Guam."

Senator Davis—"I don't think it will come up in the Senate because of the overwhelming vote against it in the House. I am not prepared to say how I will vote if it does."

Meanwhile, a move was under way in the House to revive the Guam issue as a strictly civil harbor development. Leading opponents of the measure when the vote was taken last week indicated they would not oppose improvements on the island if undertaken by the Army engineeds, as are other domestic rivers and harbors improvements. Chief obstacle in the path is that Guam is now a naval station, and governed by the Navy. In the Senate, Senator Walsh said his separate measure for nonmilitary improvement of the island would leave the Navy in charge.

Roosevelt Ship Believed Off To Charleston

President Due Here Saturday; Talks War Game With Admirals

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 28.—President Roosevelt was believed heading tonight for Charleston, S. C., after a Caribbean conference with high Naval officers aboard the cruiser Houston on lessons taught by the South Atlantic war game.

The discussion took place off the little island of Culebra, between Puerto Rico and St. Thomas, as nearly 140 ships, the entire maneuver force, anchored nearby.

Due Here Saturday

Participants included Admiral Claude C. Bloch, chief umpire of the continental defense maneuvers; Admiral E. C. Kalbfus, who commanded the "white" invading fleet; Vice Admiral Adolphus Andrews, leader of the "black" defense forces, and Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval operations.

Admiral Leahy accompanied the President on the Houston when he sailed from Key West February 18. The cruiser will reach Charleston Friday unless present plans are changed.

The rest of the fleet is to sail April 1 for the New York World's Fair. The President is due at Washington Saturday.

Ships, Planes Complimented

"A general fleet engagement began at daylight Monday and was conducted by all units of the two fleets until 1 p. m.," said a message from the Houston received here last night.

"During the engagement this morning the wind was fresh and the sea choppy, and the ships and planes deserve credit for the excellent handling of the many types of offensive and defensive tactics which were emphasized."

Negrin Cabinet Secret Session Delays Action on Surrender

Meeting 'Somewhere in Alicante' Quits Without Decision to Convene In Madrid; Azana Urges Peace

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 1 (Wednesday).—The future of the Spanish republic, surrender or apparently futile continuation of warfare—remained unsettled today after a secret session of the cabinet of Premier Negrin adjourned without announcing any decision.

The cabinet, meeting "somewhere in Alicante Province," adjourned at 2:30 a. m. and prepared to meet again in Madrid. An official communique said Negrin had informed it of the "general situation," which included lack of a president and lack of the status of government in the official eyes of most of the world.

Manuel Azana, president of the republic through the bitter 31 months of civil war, made public his resignation yesterday.

Azana Urges Peace

He urged peace in a document written with a shaking hand, and given to the press at the provincial French village of Collognes-Sous-Saleve, his home in exile.

Britain and France were completing formalities of recognition of Franco's government, announced yesterday.

Julio Alvarez del Vayo, Madrid foreign minister who flew into central Spain from France two days ago, took to the cabinet a report on French and British recognition of Franco. It was his task, also, to tell the cabinet of his failure to get Azana's backing for further resistance.

At Collognes-Sous-Saleve Azana waited to see if Negrin would accept his former chief's counsel and give up.

Franco Envoy Takes Embassy

In his letter of resignation Azana said the chief of the republican army—Gen. Jose Miaja—had informed him before he left Spain that the war was "irremediably lost."

The former president said he then personally proposed peace to Negrin to spare his country "new and sterile sacrifices." He himself, Azana said, worked to bring about such peace, but achieved "nothing positive."

Jose Maria Quinones de Leon, Franco's representative in Paris, entered the Spanish embassy late yesterday, shortly after departure of Dr. Marcelino Pascua, republican ambassador.

Franco Poised For Attack

Burgos, Spain, Feb. 28 (AP).—Nationalist Gen. Franco today held an army of more than 500,000 men ready for attack on remaining republican territory should unconditional surrender be delayed.

It was reported Franco was not making any overtures or sending an ultimatum because, it was said, the "enemy must know that his (Franco's) columns will assault the central zone unless there is an unconditional surrender."

Relief and transportation agencies have been mobilized to feed 2,000,000 if the republicans surrender.

Yugoslavia 28th to Act

Belgrade, Feb. 28 (AP).—Yugoslavia today extended recognition to Gen. Franco's government, becoming the twenty-eighth nation to extend full recognition.

U. S. Germans Urge Americanism, Poll Of Irishman Shows

Philadelphia, Feb. 28 (AP).—An Irishman who advertised in 26 newspapers to find out what German-Americans think of the bund announced tonight "first returns" were "90 per cent Americanism."

George E. Tierney said the advertisements kept him busy reading letters—many written in German—and almost all professing allegiance to the United States.

"Modern Shaker" Neckwear Frills

—dainty, adorably feminine collars with a story

Behind these exquisitely dainty little collar-frills "hangs a tale." Once there was a religious sect—early American, they were—who imposed isolation upon themselves. From that isolation sprung a native philosophy, founded on the principles of simplicity, functionalism—and a high standard of fine workmanship. Recently there has been a revival of interest in their history, their simple style. From this interest came the inspiration for this thoroughly 1939 neckwear: frothy panels, fichus, high round collars of organdy, plain-cut pique collars. Sketched $1.95

Others, $1 to $2.95

Columbia Lays Plans For More 'Oscars'

'Best Pictures' Award Winner Bears Down; Notable Premieres Tonight and Tomorrow; Jottings of Interest in the Theater

COLUMBIA PICTURES CORPORATION has no intention of resting on its oars, as the saying goes. Having just won another Academy award for the best picture of the year, with Frank Capra's production of "You Can't Take It With You," Columbia, as it has in past years under similar circumstances, plans to go right on from there.

BELL

As an earnest of this intention, it announces that Frank Lloyd, director of "Cavalcade," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Wells Fargo" and many other distinguished films, will personally produce and direct "The Tree of Liberty," a mighty patriotic drama, based on the novel by Elizabeth Page; that Mitchell Leisen, another brilliant director, is now completing "Our Wife," costarring Loretta Young and Cary Grant; that Wesley Ruggles—who made "Cimarron"—will produce two pictures each year for Columbia, the first to be "Arizona," adapted from the new novel by Clarence Budington Kelland. It does not end there.

Rouben Mamoulian has been assigned to picturize the famous Clifford Odets play of "Golden Boy;" Howard Hawks now has in production one of his traditionally big pictures, tentatively bearing the title of "Plane No. 4;" Frank Capra is at work on "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," a sequel to the original "Mr. Deeds" item, which assumes a new title because Gary Cooper could not be obtained to play the title role and thus perpetuate the character in which he went to town. Mr. Capra, as everybody must know by now, has been in Washington more than once in recent months in research work on this story with a distinctly Washington and legislative flavor.

And Fay Bainter, accoladed by the Academy as the best supporting actress of the year, has just completed the starring role in "The Lady and the Mob" on the Columbia lot. This is said to be a decided novelty in screen comedy-dramas, being based on the notion that a society matron, when she puts her mind to it, finds it no very difficult job to mop up a "mob" of hoodlums.

And that's the way it goes at Columbia. And out of it all they cop these Academy awards with astonishing regularity. Somebody on the lot must know what he is doing.

When he imparted all of this information to me, it was nice of that high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, Eastern division manager for Columbia pictures, to preface his information with these remarks: "My compliments to you on what has proven a most accurate prediction. Many weeks ago you boldly stated that 'You Can't Take It With You' would be chosen by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences as the outstanding motion picture produced in 1938. Naturally, Nelson, I rejoice that my company has been so signally honored." Mr. Galanty must have in mind the heading we had the temerity to run over our preview story on "You Can't Take It With You," before the picture ever was released in Washington, which said something like, "Boy, Dust Off Another Oscar for Mr. Frank Capra." We stuck to that by placing the film at the top of our list of the "ten best pictures of the year." And so, by the grace of Jehovah and good luck, it came out. "You Can't Take It With You," incidentally, will be shown again soon at the Metropolitan Theater.

These world premieres are apt to take on grandiose proportions. Take the case of "The Spirit of Culver," at RKO-Keith's tomorrow night, for instance. After the fashion of the old minstrel band that used to give a concert in front of the opera house in the old home town before the burnt-cork boys went to work in the semicircle, the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, under the direction of Leon Brusiloff, will give a half hour's concert in front of the theater prior to the inauguration of the major events of the evening.

With Washington's Culver alumni, officials of the American Legion and officers of the Army and Navy in attendance, these later events promise to take on imposing stature. The guest list for this occasion is headed by Admiral Hugh Rodman and Gen. Peyton March, chief of staff during the World War, both former students at Culver, the celebrated Hoosier military academy whose Black Horse Troop has been conspicious in so many Presidential inauguration parades. The additional list of guest notables is longer than you have been in town.

It should prove to be quite a night on Fifteenth street—especially for us Indianians, who take an especial pride in Culver, whether we ever went there or not.

More immediate, of course, is the reserved-seat premiere of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," in Loew's Palace Theater tonight at 8:45. So much already has been said here about the probable superiorities of this screen exhibit that further expatiation seems a little on the side of performing a work of supererogation—whatever that is. "Pygmalion" is a hit in our book, even before the picture has been viewed.

Dots and Dashes

If you care to know what sort of high-pressure publicity is brought to bear on the world at large in marketing a "super-special-colossal-terriffic" film epic, read Frank J. Taylor's "Hollywood, Calif.—Mar. 1," in the March issue of Scribner's Magazine . . . The compactly organized promotional forces of the motion picture industry make some of us old individual press agents look pretty sick . . . They probably could elect a President, if given the assignment . . . Not a bad idea, at that . . . John Golden has completed the cast to support Gertrude Lawrence in Samson Raphaelson's new comedy of "Skylark" . . . It is a honey . . . The play will open in Boston on March 13, with Washington to follow, after Toronto . . . "Susan and God" will continue on tour, with Jessie Royce Landis in the role of Susan Trexel . . . "Night Must Fall," Emlyn Williams' three-act thriller, will be presented by the Little Theater of Alexandria, in Lyceum Hall, on March 9 and 10 . . . Antonio Moreno, star of the old silent days, has his most important comeback role to date in "Ambush," opening Friday at the Metropolitan . . . Gladys Swarthout stars, without benefit of song.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 28.—Would that I were Judy Garland. She's on her way to New York with the Roger Edens. Roger has coached and written lots of her songs at Metro. And in New York, Sophie Tucker will take over the job of showing her the big town. Oh, to be a child again—under those auspices. No money in the world could buy that.

Al Green was convulsed when he asked Gracie Allen's kids, who were visiting on the set for the first time, if they liked watching mama. "Like her? Why, we gave up the zoo to see mommie.

Claude Binyon cut his vacation short when his 9-year-old son got a streptococci infection. He was in Arizona writing Wes Ruggles' new story. Claude got into our business by mistake—the luckiest one anybody ever had. He was writing a column and at the same time what he hoped would be "the great American novel." His boss, when he heard about it, showed him, not gently, the gate. Then he met Wes Ruggles and they've been practically inseparable ever since.

For a birthday present May 29, Darryl Zanuck is giving Ty Power one of those gala press previews with all the trimmings of "Rose of Washington Square"—What, no presents?

The feud is on again between Charlie Chaplin, Sam Goldwyn and Doug Fairbanks. But Jimmie Roosevelt and Charlie are thicker than—Yes, uneasy lies the head that wears a United Artists' crown.

June Lang pouted because Milton Bren asked her to ride in his station wagon to the Hal Roach party. But rather than miss it, she rode. Guests made bets as to whether Blumie would speak to her. They lost, he didn't!

It was fun watching the staid Leslie Howard and his little French friend, Violetta Cummington, lead off the dancing at Marcel LaMaze's the other night. Looks like a good teacher, too.

Norma Shearer, with birds in her hair, cheek-to-cheeking with Brian Aherne, same place.

It wouldn't surprise their friends if Richard Tauber's wife remains behind to do a picture and lets him make the rest of his concert tour alone.

Now that she's become an American citizen and is upholding our flag, I hear that Wendy Barrie is about to lead Richard Greene to the altar, or vice versa.

That Barbara Hutton is certainly a sport-loving girl. First she marries a traveling man who loved racing cars—Prince Mdivani. Then a famous skater and skiier, Count Haugwitz von Reventlow. Now, I hear she's about to step off with Robert Sweeney, the British-American golf champion, who eats, sleeps and plays golf 24 hours a day. Bob in days gone by was a very close friend of our motion picture star, Merle Oberon.

George Seitz, who just finished the last Hardy picture, discovered in going through his scrap book that he's directed 140 pictures. Started in 1917, wrote and directed "The Perils of Pauline." Then people wonder where he got the great knowledge of humanity he puts into the Hardys.

Actress Director At Little Theater

Because her appearance with the Long Beach Players' Guild won her her first professional stage role, her first picture role, and finally a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Laraine Johnson has continued to return to her home town's little theater, despite her success in pictures.

Now playing the feminine lead in "Sergeant Madden," with Wallace Beery, Miss Johnson, regarded as one of the likeliest newcomers, has been giving all her spare time during the past two weeks to the direction of a two-act musical comedy, "Sailor Maids," in Long Beach.

Star Feels Opera Can't Be Filmed

"Grand opera, in its entirety, can never be brought to the screen."

And as much as Jeanette MacDonald loves opera and the music it stands for, she is the first to admit that as screen fare it is definitely and completely "out."

"In the first place its stories are outdated," the star of the new musical, "Broadway Serenade," said. "Then, too, they move too slowly for screen audiences. The modern pace demands action in motion pictures and demands its stories uninterrupted by song. When songs can be inserted logically, well and good. But operatic recitatives would just never go in front of the cameras."

READING TIME: 1 minute, 42 seconds—but it means two hours of good fun.
PYGMALION
• This city has been selected among the First Few in America to show this extraordinary entertainment.
• In all the years we have been running a theatre, we have never had so many people ask us about a picture as about PYGMALION. The picture is the talk of America and especially of this city.
• First let us tell you what PYGMALION is not. It is not a costume picture; it is not about Greek mythology; it is not a jungle animal picture; it is not about a pig.
• PYGMALION is a strictly down-to-earth modern romantic comedy. This Bernard Shaw play, before it was a movie, was perhaps the most distinguished success in the Shavian repertoire. Mr. Shaw himself transformed it into a film. He wrote it; he watched it; he nursed it; he O.K.'d it. The result leaves nothing to be desired. You laugh at its wit—you work up emotion over the way Shaw's hero manhandles Shaw's heroine.
• In New York, Los Angeles and London more than one million movie-goers have crowded in to grin at and enjoy Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's PYGMALION. It has become a fad to quote its smart stuff. People brag about how many times they have seen it.
• Leslie Howard stars as Henry Higgins who knows all about languages but nothing about women (he hates them, he thinks). Wendy Hiller, an absolute discovery, plays Eliza Doolittle, the guttersnipe who is molded into a duchess in a short time. The rest of the cast is equally distinguished.
• PYGMALION has just been picked by 8 out of 9 New York critics on the list of the Ten Best Pictures of the Year.
• Pictures like PYGMALION come along all too rarely. The secret of its success is its happy combination of laughter and tears—the great performances of its stars and cast—the unmatchable Shaw wit and the general quality of the entire production.
• After you have seen it, we would like to hear what you have to say about it.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 28 (I.N.S.).—The rumor that the academy would refuse to send George Bernard Shaw the gold statuette after his amusing outburst last week, is emphatically denied by Donald Gledhill, executive secretary of the academy.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"It was good publicity for him and for us," said Gledhill, "and if the old boy hadn't popped off we would all have felt he was slipping."

On the heels of the academy's determination to turn the other cheek, comes the word the G. B. has given Gabriel Pascal permission to film "Major Barbara." Even more gratifying than this is the knowledge that we shall see Wendy Hiller in the title role. She recently had a baby and has been off the screen since her unforgettable performance in "Pygmalion." Pascal, who went to London to confer with the veteran scrapper on "The Doctor's Dilemma," the next Shaw picture, has cabled Zoe Akins to prepare the screen play of "Major Barbara." Zoe took her life in her hands and cabled G. B. S. her delight at the prospect of working on one of his plays.

Slow-speaking Bob Burns, who has his own style of inimitable comedy, checks in at RKO on April Fool's Day, only his arrival is no joke. He has a date with Producer George Haight to star in "American School Teacher," by George Bricker, a more serious screen play than the Bricker story for he dedicates it to the memory of his father, Daniel S. Bricker, for 52 years a leading educator in Ohio. Bob just finished "I'm From Missouri," and he chooses "American School Teacher" as the outside picture permitted him on his Paramount contract. Just between us, it was really bought with him in mind.

A deal between Mae West and Universal is sizzling hot and due to be closed any moment now. Mae, who left on a personal appearance tour here Monday, has already agreed to the financial terms offered by Universal, the only stipulation being that they find a story suitable to the Westian humor. She herself favored "Catherine the Great," a story she already owns, but Universal said no, believing a costume play would no nothing for her nor them at the box office. She will be gone for several months, and by that time she and they figure that they will be able to find a story to bring her back.

Beachcomber, Marion Davies' stray pup, has a companion. The day after our article appeared telling of the lovable canine's good fortune and how he was awarded a license, a bone and a bed, some other well-meaning soul deposited a mongrel, whose lineage is also doubtful, in the Davies' garage. Now, Marion loves dogs and fun is fun but she's asking that in the future the homeless pooches be taken elsewhere on account of she doesn't want to be forced to take out a kennel license.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Sigrid Gurie wearing a four-carat diamond ring put on her finger by Dr. Lawrence Spangard whom she'll soon wed; Elsa Maxwell, Constance Bennett's house guest, here conferring with Darryl Zanuck on her movie; Eddie Cantor hosting San Francisco's popular Mayor Rossi at the Brown Derby. He has the same qualities that made James Rolph so loved both as mayor and later as Governor; the Victor Hugo regulars batting their eyes when Joan Crawford and Charlie Martin appeared three times in one day for lunch, dinner and late supper; Steve Hannigan planes in Thursday and will be feted by the Mark Hellingers; Eleanor Powell on a busman's holiday dancing and dancing with Billy Seymour at Marcels; Gertrude Niesen, beaued by Dick Purcell, also having fun. Didn't see Vicki Lester with them. Is that romance off? The Earl Carroll was also crowded to the doors with the visiting firemen. Took some Dixon homefolk there and were they excited? A. C. Blumenthal with Steffi Duna, Phyllis Brooks and Cary Grant dancing at a spot after the fights.

Blumey, Charlie Chaplin and Joseph Schneck visiting Dolores Casey, the little girl who was sick for so long. Her spirit is amazing and deserves a big hand; Sally made up and happy again at a spot; good also to see Agnes Christine Johnson and her groom of 16 years, Frank Dazey. They were taking a night out. Rose Davies looking very stunning in a ringside table with Price David M'Dvani who looks much thinner than he did a few months ago; Ruth Skinner, estranged wife of Nick Stuart, once Sue Carol's husband, stepping out with George Suprenant; Alice Marble, the tennis champ, doing an impromptu song number at Grace Hayes lodge. That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 28.

FINANCE: The Financial Writers Association, whose members are newspaper men covering Wall Street and the Stock Exchange, opened a bank account recently with J. P. Morgan & Co. . . . During the first week the account was open their deposit slips were returned twice—because the Financial Writers had written them incorrectly . . . Then they deposited a check drawn upon a small bank in New Jersey. The bank returned the check, asking for the personal indorsement of Mr. J. P. Morgan . . . The Financial Writers then deposited another check, issued by a man who attended their recent function. This check created Wall Street history. Because, for the first time since J. P. Morgan & Co. was established, a check deposited by a Morgan client bounced back.

YOUTH: Lance Haugwitz von Reventlow, 3-year-old son of the former Barbara Hutton, arrived in St. Moritz this month to spend some time with his father . . . A luxurious car brought him to the Palace Hotel there, and two footmen helped him alight . . . The child walked up to the doorman and asked: "Is this the Ritz Hotel?" . . . "No," he was told, "this is the Palace Hotel" . . . "Oh, well," shrugged the 3-year-old heir to the Woolworth millions, "I guess it'll do."

Ambition: John Barrymore confided to a New York producer last week that he is planning to appear in a Scottish version of "Macbeth," with the entire cast delivering their lines in Scotch dialect . . . Elaine Barrie and her mother heard Barrymore tell this . . . "Oh, no," said Mrs. Jacobs, "that won't happen. You see, I don't think Elaine is ready for Shakespeare yet."

ENTERPRISE: The current issue of the Saturday Evening Post contains a story about sandhogs, written by Borden Chase . . . The author was a sandhog until 4 years ago—when he decided to devote all his time to writing . . . His name was Frank Fowler, but he believed that the name didn't sound big-time enough for the big-time success he expected. He therefore selected "Borden Chase"—"Borden" from the big-time Borden Milk Co. and "Chase" from the Chase Bank.

HONOR: Henri Bernstein, the famed French writer who fought a duel with a critic in Paris last year—allegedly because of an unfavorable review of Bernstein's play—was introduced to Mrs. Alexis Thompson a few days ago . . . "Now about that duel," asked Mrs. Thompson. "Isn't it true that it was all over a woman?" . . . "I wouldn't say Yes," confessed Bernstein," but I wouldn't say No."

DETERMINATION: Paul Douglas, the radio announcer who just returned from Hollywood, reports that during the floods in Los Angeles, two men—who had found safety in a tree—noticed a derby hat in the raging torrent below them. The derby moved 12 feet upstream, stopped, and then moved 12 feet downstream. The derby stopped again, moved 12 upstream, stopped and then back . . . "Let's jump in and save that guy," one of the men suggested . . . "No, that's my stubborn brother, Herbert," the other informed. "If he wants to mow a lawn—he'll mow it."

CHATTER: Eva Curie has arranged to arrive in this country in March . . . Justice Brandeis will be invited to make his first public appearance since his retirement at a Tolerance Rally which probably will be held at Carnegie Hall . . . "Grover Bacon Smith," who wrote the story of Al Hirschfield, the caricaturist in Coronet, actually is Harry Saltpeter . . . Agitation soon will start for a swap of the first British plane, owned by the Smithsonian Institution, for the Wright Brothers plane, now in the British Museum . . . The New Yorker magazine, America's most sophisticated publication, rejected Cafe Society's ad—because it was too suggestive.

TRIUMPH: Despite Grover Whalen's announcement that the New York World's Fair will pay no homage to fan or bubble dancing, the Fair tendered its official respects a few days ago to a lady whose appearance would be banned thereat . . . The Nicaraguan Government was anxious to sublease some of its Fair ground to a group of American concessionnaires, who were invited to visit the grounds and examine the prospects . . . The concessionnaires arrived, with a young lady, and were met by the officials, who escorted the party in an Official Car . . . The young lady who thus was accorded an official reception was Chiquita—the bubble dancer at N. T. G.'s.

DEFEAT: George Gans, head of Matchabelli, learned that a small California shop didn't transact sufficient business to warrant their continued trading, and so severed all connections. The shop's proprietor replied with a series of abusive letters, addressed directly to the President of Matchabelli . . . Gans answered it himself. He wrote: "Dear Milly: Don't be silly. Yours sincilly, Matchabilli."

Frederic Perkins Quits as Welfare Board Member

Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, member of the Board of Public Welfare, resigned that position recently, it was diclosed yesterday.

Appointed to the board four years ago, Dr. Perkins was chairman of the important public assistance committee. Last year, when the relief appropriations were cut by the House District Committee, Dr. Perkins led many civic and social groups in protest against the reduced funds.

Petworth Liquor License Protested

Citizens' Delegation Says Restaurant Is 'Too Near to School'

Citizens of Petworth yesterday asked the A. B. C. board to deny a liquor license to George Walsh, restaurant proprietor at 829 Upshur street northwest.

Appearing at a public hearing a delegation, headed by H. O. Craver, of the Petworth Citizens Association, said the establishment is "too near the school development."

Walsh, represented by F. Joseph Donohue, has a beer license and has petitioned for a class C license, which will permit the sale of mixed drinks.

One witness said "many inmates of Soldiers' Home" frequent the establishment. Protesting issuance of the license were the Board of Education, the Baptist, Methodist, Episcopal and Presbyterian churches in the Petworth area.

The hearing was curtailed when Mrs. Agnes Mason, a member of the board, was called to Congress on budget discussion. She said attorneys for the petitioner and the protestants would be given a further opportunity to present their views.

D. C. Philatelists Aroused by Senate Ban on Exhibits

Action of the Senate sub-committee on Appropriations in killing the $6,560 Postoffice Department item that would have sent a truck load of philatelic exhibits on a tour of American educational institutions, drew fire from Washington stamp collectors yesterday.

William M. Stuart, vice president, American Airmail Society and member of Washington Collectors Club, Branch 5, Society of Philatelic Americans, said Congress would be importuned to bring the truck out of its shed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. The Department said numerous requests have been made to photograph it by nationally known picture magazines, but the Postmaster General has declined the authorization.

Symphony in Danger

For one reason or another the National Symphony Orchestra campaign has bogged down badly this year. Reports last night showed the sustaining fund $37,000 short of the minimum required to keep the institution functioning next season. And unless the final reports, at today's luncheon meeting, are better than anticipated, the outlook will be exceedingly serious.

A part of the gloomy prospect is perhaps due to overconfidence on the part of the campaign committee. Last year the city rallied splendidly to avert the threat of disbandment. This year, with brighter economic skies, failure was not considered a serious possibility. Yet today undisguised failure stares the orchestra in the face.

The change in the date of the campaign has also proved unfortunate. Moved up to avoid coincidence with the income-tax period, the campaign fell into the fire of a veritable epidemic of February ailments. Both prospective donors and trusted workers have been laid up in a way which has hampered the drive materially.

Today, when gifts from Government departments and from the schools will be reported, the disappointing total of contributors should climb to a figure at least approaching the 6,000 individual donors listed last year. As a wholly democratic institution, a large number of small supporters are more important to the orchestra than a few large donors. And it is in the numbers, rather than the size of individual subscriptions, that the deficiency is now most marked.

It is of course inconceivable that the orchestra should be dissolved for lack of support. This morning should bring forth all the procrastinating well wishers. If it fails to do so the campaign committee must be held together a few days longer. The alternative of disruption is simply not to be considered. It would be bad enough if the sustaining fund fell short of the total needed for the summer evening concerts at the Watergate.

Out Go State Tariffs

Because of the great importance attached to the Supreme Court's rulings affecting the National Labor Relations Board, a significant opinion by Justice Frankfurter went almost unnoticed in yesterday's news. In this unanimous opinion the court struck a decisive blow at trade-strangling barriers erected by State legislatures.

By affirming a lower court decision the supreme tribunal invalidated a Florida statute of 1937 which undertook to impose a tariff upon the importation of cement. This duty was camouflaged as an inspection fee. On the assumption that an inferior quality of cement was being shipped into the State, the Legislature authorized the State Road Department to fix minimum standards for such material offered for sale or use in Florida. No complaint could be offered against that section of the act. But to implement the statute the Legislature imposed an "inspection fee" of 15 cents per hundredweight upon all cement imported from foreign countries.

The court found that the inspection fee amounted to "sixty times the actual cost of inspection." It was more than three times the duty on cement fixed by the Belgian trade agreement. Moreover, the inspection scheme and fee were applied only to imported cement. Obviously the State had overstepped its legitimate function of protecting its people against inferior cement and had invaded the power to regulate foreign commerce granted exclusively to Congress.

In accord with its long-established custom the court looked beyond the pretense of the Legislature that it was exercising legitimate police powers. Justice Frankfurter went to the heart of the matter when he concluded that "the very purpose of the statute is to keep out foreign goods." "Such an assumption of national powers by a State," he further asserted, "has, ever since March 12, 1827, . . . been found to be in collision with the Constitution."

The principle reiterated in this decision is an old one, but it has gained new significance in recent years. As if in response to Federal invasion of States' rights, legislatures in a considerable number of State capitals have sought devious means of encroaching upon Federal powers. Not all of the methods they have used to erect trade barriers at State lines have been found unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. But the current decision pointedly emphasizes the fact that there are limits beyond which the States cannot go in interfering with interstate and international trade.

The decision should give added impetus to the movement to wipe out restrictive devices by interstate agreement. Most officials now realize that efforts to Balkanize America are mutually destructive. The quicker such tactics are abandoned, the better it will be for all concerned.

Clarifying Decisions

It would be both unfortunate and misleading to regard the three labor decisions handed down by the Supreme Court last Monday as a rebuke to the National Labor Relations Board. The function of the court is not to praise or blame, but to interpret and clarify the laws. The latter end has been accomplished in a series of decisions that helps to define the vague legislation which the NLRB has been called upon to administer.

In the Fansteel case the chief point at issue was not the legality or illegality of the sit-down strike. Very few people—and certainly none of the Supreme Court justices—would deny the illegality of forcible seizure and occupancy of property belonging to another person, with the purpose of extorting concessions from that person. The moot question was whether the NLRB has the power, under the Wagner act, to order the reinstatement of employes who unlawfully participate in sit-down strikes.

A majority of the court held the contrary. "There is not a line in the statute," Chief Justice Hughes stated, "to warrant the conclusion that it is any part of the policies of the act to encourage employes to resort to force and violence in defiance of the law of the land. On the contrary, the purpose of the act is to promote peaceful settlements of disputes by providing legal remedies for the invasion of employes' rights."

While the Fansteel case is the most important of the three decisions, the others are close seconds. The court has, in both the Sands Manufacturing Co. case and the Columbian Enamel & Stamping Co. case, brought sharply to public notice the fact that legalized protection of collective bargaining carries with it certain inescapable responsibilities on the part of organized labor.

In the Sands case the court held that failure of the union to live up to the terms of its contract leaves the employer at liberty to treat contract violators as though they had voluntarily severed relations with the company. In spite of the lack of protection for the employer under the labor relations act, the court has here struck a powerful blow in his behalf by emphasizing the basic importance of contractual obligations.

The third case—that of the Columbian Enamel & Stamping Co.—marks another landmark in the rational interpretation of the labor relations act. For the court here passed judgment upon the validity of the evidence upon which the NLRB based an order. Under the law the findings of the board as to the facts, if supported by evidence, are conclusive. But, said the court, such evidence must be more substantial than that in this issue. The note of warning to the board is clear.

By these three clarifying decisions the Supreme Court has done much to correct the one-sided emphasis upon the bargaining rights of employes which is an outstanding characteristic and defect of the labor relations act. If cases involving these issues had reached the court of last resort some months ago, the country might have been spared several major labor disturbances. And the NLRB might have avoided the dangerous mistake—due to a large extent to the character of the law—of placing a far too exclusive emphasis upon the rights of labor.

Pointing The Moral

Two points of weakness in the District government are indicated by the bill, now before a conference committee, providing for reinstatement of two Washington policemen. Fortunately, one of these defects has already been corrected and the way has been opened for action on the other.

Several years ago Officers David Thompson and Ralph S. Warner were ousted by action of the police trial board on the charge of accepting bribes. It is now admitted that the evidence against them was flimsy and unreliable. That fact gave rise to suspicions that the police trial board was not functioning satisfactorily. Investigation by some alert District officials confirmed that assumption.

As a result the board has been reorganized. Instead of being composed of three police officers, who could eliminate any member of the force meeting with their disapproval, it is now composed of an assistant corporation counsel, a civilian member and a representative of the police. A body of this composite character should render far more satisfactory service.

For some time the Commissioners sustained the trial board in its ouster of the two officers. When the case had been more fully explored, they made an about-face. But they had no authority to correct the mistake that seemingly had been made. Only by act of Congress can the poor judgment of the former police trial board be set aside. That is obviously a clumsy and undesirable procedure.

Congressmen as well as District citizens may find in situations of this sort the most compelling arguments for enactment of a real charter for the District, giving local officials the powers of a municipal corporation, as the Griffenhagen report recommends.

The Conclave

Today the members of the Sacred College become sequestered in the Vatican and will not be released until they have chosen the successor to Pius XI. Meanwhile, conflicting reports emanate from Rome and Vatican City as to whom the Princes of the Church may choose. Among these is the persistent rumor that there is something more than a theoretical possibility of a non-Italian, or even perhaps a non-European Pope.

It would be far-fetched to assume that such rumors have any basis of direct information. Moreover, the world-wide interest in the election, the relatively long interregnum that has preceded it, the indefatigable intrigues of secular governments, and the very nature of the crisis now confronting Christendom, have all contributed to an atmosphere favorable to conjecture.

A tradition more than four centuries old is not easily put aside, especially in an institution that embodies 2,000 years of tradition. The strong probability, therefore, is that the new Pope will be, like all others since Hadrian VI, an Italian. But this probability may diminish in direct ratio to the duration of the conclave and to the number of times that the column of smoke ascends from the burning of inconclusive ballots.

The more immediate question would seem to be whether, in such troubled and anarchical times as these, the interests of the Church would best be advanced by the election of a Pope conspicuous for sanctity, or by the choice of one prepared by training and experience for such tremendous politico-religious problems as face the Church today.

The election of a spiritual Pope has been openly demanded by the totalitarian states, though not on any spiritual grounds. The election of a spiritual Pope may also be favored by those Catholics who believe that a modus vivendi with the ascendant Fascist powers is possible. But there are also those, and their number appears to be increasing, who believe that both the temporal and spiritual interests of the Church would today be served better if the moral weight of the Papacy were placed upon the side of the democracies.

A compromise between these viewpoints is fully possible. By electing a non-European Pope the Sacred College might be able to avoid all implication of influence from any of the European powers. It is perhaps on the basis of some such reasoning that the name of Roderique, Cardinal Villeneuve of Quebec, more prominent as an opponent of Marxist materialism than of Nazi paganism, has persistently been included among the leading candidates. And, especially if the conclave is protracted, there is the further possibility that the choice might fall upon one of the three cardinals from the United States.

Another Tragic Era

When President Roosevelt named Claude Bowers our Ambassador to Spain in 1933, he did not and could not realize how grimly appropriate the appointment would turn out to be.

Mr. Bowers had worked long and faithfully in the Democratic party vineyard. His appointment, therefore, was in the time-honored American tradition of a reward for services rendered. Madrid was a pleasant place in those days, with no overly exacting duties and abundant opportunities for a man of Mr. Bowers' scholarly temperament to pursue his avocation. The author of "The Tragic Era" could congratulate himself on his assignment.

But 1933 turned out to be the sunset period of the Spanish republic. Twilight followed and in the summer of 1936 the beginning of darkness which this week completely covered the Iberian horizon. Indeed, for the past two and a half years Ambassador Bowers has been forced to watch Spanish developments from the safety of St. Jean de Luz, in France, and those developments have constituted a Spanish "tragic era" certainly comparable with that he described in his book by that name.

Mr. Bowers' work does not deal with the American civil war but with its aftermath. The tragic era in the United States began in 1861 but did not end with Appomattox. The period of so-called reconstruction was as tragic in its way as the preceding period of bloodletting had been. And that may be the case in Spain, too.

All true friends of that great nation will hope that in this instance history will not repeat itself; that the victors in the civil war now ending will prove less vindictive and more far-seeing than did some of those who had the destiny of the United States in their keeping in the period following Lincoln's assassination.

Perhaps they will. Certainly no better advice can be given them than that they read and ponder Mr. Bowers' book. While dealing with a particular period and particular country, the lesson it teaches is timeless and universal.

Custody of Children

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent ruling of a District Court that a mother, Mrs. Harry Newman, must give up her 19-month-old daughter is sufficient to arouse consternation in the hearts of the mothers of this city. I have had an experience similar to that of Mrs. Newman. I went into the District Court here in a matter of custody of my child. I had always taken care of this child myself.

After the family break, I was fortunate to secure a permanent, well-paid position here. At the time I went into court, I had this position and the father of the child had only temporary work after an extended period of unemployment. Of the two, I was by far the better situated economically.

The District Court heard no evidence whatever. It asked a few questions of the father and myself and then made an amazing speech to the effect that there seemed to be no fault against the mother and no fault against the father; that under the common law, the father is the natural guardian of the child, and that therefore the custody was awarded to him.

Now no restraints were placed upon the father and no part of the child's time was given to me and no provision made for me to see it. The father immediately sent the child out of this city to a point too far distant for me to reach except occasionally. For the past seven years this child has been reared by strangers.

If any one had told me that such fantastic justice could be meted out to an unoffending mother against whom there was not a single charge, I would not have believed it. But it was, and by the courts of this our Capital City.

Perhaps we could get together and get a domestic relations court established here, with judges more understanding and humane; less indoctrinated with Blackstone and the common law—a court in which we could plead our own cases without the intrusion of lawyers who prosper at our misfortune and all too frequently use these cases of domestic tragedy to advertise themselves.

"What For Is Democracy"

To the Editor of The Washington Post—Sir: In your editorial of the 22d relative to the rally of the German-American Bund in New York City, you speak of a "man in a checkered mackinaw" who kept shouting: "What for is democracy?"

You suggest that the answer to this question was demonstrated in the official sanction for and protection of an ugly exhibition by a minority. The point is well made. I agree with you that the answer would seem inescapable to anyone more intelligent than the "man in the checkered mackinaw."

Unfortunately, however, there is an angle to the story that does escape more intelligent people. I have the impression that this "slightly inarticulate" and, vague interrogator was very poor, had in his time been often hungry, cold and tired. I have the impression that he had suffered heretofore a prolonged and mute despair. At last, why should he not ask "What for is democracy?"

How well can we expect him to differentiate between acute misery experienced in a free country and that allegedly imposed by a dictatorship? If to him a democracy means the paralyzed distribution of an obvious abundance, while a dictatorship symbolizes security, we must anticipate his preference.

In this case it is not the offender who needs intelligence so much as the offended, enough intelligence to realize that a theoretical liberty will not satisfy need, that static independence and the preserved publication of "inalienable rights" will not compensate for destitution experienced as a bitter actuality.

The Bund Meeting

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The uproar being raised concerning the Nazi bund meeting held in New York last week seems to this reader, at least, out of all proportion to the importance of the event. To an impartial observer all the disorder and noise were caused by a group comprised largely of Communists, who are the ones in this country who throw the most hysterics over Nazilism.

This is easily understood, for the Nazi bunds are poison to the Communists, and vice versa. In addition, the Communists are straining every effort to create an issue in this country through which they can establish a bond of sympathy and co-operation with the American people. This established, subsequent steps toward a dominant role in American Government and politics will follow as a matter of course. This is no apology for the Nazi bunds, for, as Westbrook Pegler has pointed out, the average American regards both the Communist and Nazi performances with amused contempt.

It seems to this writer that the vehement protest of the bund meeting from "liberals" (Communists to some people) serves the purpose of covering up the fact that the disorders and violence attending that meeting were caused not by the Nazis but by their opponents. The police were required to prevent violence not on the part of those holding the meeting, but of those who wished to break it up.

That very fact demonstrates the Communist attitude of defiance of law and order and disregard of the fundamental rights under the American Constitution of peaceable assembly and of free speech. The right of free speech does not include the right to advocate the overthrow of the Government by force; and if any such right had been abused at that meeting, the authorities would have taken the proper action, you may be sure.

The conclusions to be drawn from the fracas in New York are these:

1. The intolerant, bubble-rousing speeches in Madison Square Garden and the disorders outside are both repugnant to Americans, to whom the provisions of the Constitution are very real—to be defended by force, if necessary.

2. The Nazi members in this country are a very small portion of our population, and have not, so far as has been proved, directly violated our laws. On the other hand their active opponents have attempted by violence to prevent the Nazis from exercising the very rights of speech and assembly which they claim so vociferously for themselves and for much more dangerous purposes.

3. The Communists are a far greater menace to the country by virtue of their much larger number, their occupation of public offices of importance, and last but not least, their appeal to the gullible American's native love of freedom and justice—although the liberty and justice held out by Communism are wholly illusory.

4. Lastly, the Communists are doing everything in their power to create an issue in this country whereby those opposed to Nazilism will be lined up with the Communists against those opposed to Communism, whom they call Nazis or Fascists. This is an entirely false issue, alien to everything truly American.

There can be no question of fascism or communism in this country. The answer to the whole situation is to stick to our own American principles and refuse to be stampeded into un-American thought and activity by either Communists or Nazis. ELEANOR H. FINCH.

"Boring From Within"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of February 22 on the activities of the Nazifest of the Bund was a splendid gesture of liberality. If anything, it was too splendid.

Quoting the dictum of Voltaire was a fine display of intellectual honesty and fair play.

So was mentioning the rights (psuedo-rights in many cases involving the Negro) of the minorities, freedom of speech and of assemblage under the Constitution.

Yet one angle open to censure of your unquestionably good editorial was that it invited criticism because of the omission of one salient fact. It overlooked the sinister and underlying intentions of the Bund.

We know that wholesome criticism is a part of democratic procedure. But much of the criticism projected by the Bund was malevolent, with ulterior objectives—presumably anti-Semitic—and obviously designed to stimulate social frictions and intolerant racial antagonisms.

It was out of similar meetings in Germany, it is timely to reflect, that the present Nazi party was born.

Moreover, it is a spurious Americanism that, while professing allegiance to American ideals of government, parades in the uniforms and displays the symbols of the enemies of that government.

Voltaire's words of tolerance can scarcely be carried to the extreme of watching believers in an alien philosophy of government hold demonstrations of the "boring from within," tactics of subversive propaganda against the Government under which they live.

True, this has been done before. But never with the advanced effrontery and sinister technique of the Bund.

Matters of Diction

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am glad Bob Considine is back on the line where we chronic Post readers can be "with" him. My only regret is that the blurb written about the new features (and about Bob, in particular) got out on a limb by saying how completely "literate" Bob is. Nobody cared a whoop whether he was literate or not, for it is Bob himself we like and not his literacy. But that crack, that downright brag, made me put on my critical britches and give him a real looking-over.

In his first (and mighty fine and readable) article, he says, "I have been giving off clouds of memories, like a horse gives off fog on a damp day"—bad usage to say "like" instead of "as;" and he repeats this punk usage in the second sector of the same compound sentence.

Further on he says, "I don't believe newspaper readers are quite as interested," etc., when what he means, if put into purest English as the ultra-literate would put it, is that "I believe newspaper readers are not interested," etc. Also "dived" and not "dove" is the past of "dive."

Hair-splitting, you say? Yes, indeedy! And whose fault is it? I read Bob for Bob's sake and not for literacy's sake. It was an unintentionally low-down trick stirring up us offensive purists by hurling such a challenge into our dentistry. To us, Bob is now committed to literacy, and Heaven help him and us! And it isn't Bob's fault. He made no claim. I hope he'll go on being himself.

Seeds Of Chance

SOME PEOPLE prefer their mysteries between the covers of books, with Philo Vance or Hercule Poirot or Nero Wolfe doing mental gymnastics from page to page before arriving at the final and inevitable climax. Others go far afield in their search for the unknown—buried treasure and the like. I know one man who spends his spare time pouring over old prints and manuscripts, trying to find an answer to the secret of the Lost Atlantis. All these pursuits have their elements of fascination, but, after all, why follow a vicarious sport when a patch of earth or even a flower pot will afford a proving ground and laboratory for the most profound mystery of all? For is anything more amazing or exciting than a seed?

Here is a small but definite clew. Within it lies the secret of existence, and one is elated and intoxicated at the sense of power it imparts. I am not speaking of the nicely segregated packets with lush pictures on their faces, or the business-like brown envelopes that come from the great nurseries. I use the word broadly, meaning the germ of the plant, whether it is a dried-up bulb, or a few brown pellets in an old envelope tucked in a corner of the desk drawer and labeled "Aunt Susan's giant nasturtiums." It might be a cutting that sprouts in a jelly glass on a kitchen window ledge, or the wizened root a neighbor passed across the fence.

They all defy solution until the last—their time of flowering—and the true gardener will carry with him a suppressed excitement that endures throughout the season, discovering in the end that the most unexpected source often produces the most astounding blossom. It is a reversal of the old routine formula of finding the culprit, for in this case it is the hero who is unknown.

Several years ago my father planted a small chrysanthemum root which had been inclosed as a bonus with an order of roses. By fall it had reached the second story windows and had over a hundred magnificent white pompons, many of them 5 inches across. In due time a picture appeared among the unbelievables in the Sunday supplements, for a neighbor had submitted a snapshot to one of the dealers in wonders.

On the other hand, the blue morning glory seeds I planted last year finally blossomed (although that is too exuberant a term) into pale sickly flowers that looked like faces at a sweatshop window.

It is partly this element of chance that gives the gardening addict his greatest source of interest. When you toss a few seeds into the black earth, tamp them down and water them, you might well consider that you are rolling just so many dice. But in this case, the dice are loaded. Discounting the natural agencies of proper soil, sun and water, the result is a matter of predestination.

In these days of super-development along every line, we have the old-fashioned flowers in fine new forms—dwarf and giant, double and single, in glorious colors that our great-grandmothers would have thought incredible. And yet to the inexperienced eye, the seeds remain the same. Who can tell that this tiny grain will produce a ruffled cerise petunia, and that this other will be moon white and fragrant? The knife-blade seed of the marigold might bring flowers that are small and coppery, or shaggy and lemon yellow. Who knows? This infinite variety of form and color may puzzle us, but it never seems to confuse the seed itself. It makes a laudable effort to mind its own business, and, come what may, will do its best to be what nature intended.

With spring comes the natural urge to grow. One look at the vegetable bin announces the new season, no matter what the weatherman says. Potatoes are all eyes, and the onions have sprouted. There is no need to go sentimental and give seeds and roots credit for such sagacity. It goes without saying that nothing will stop Mother Nature.

She has given the wild seeds the same impelling power as the cultivated ones. That delightful little pest, the dandelion, has as much character and determination as any plant in the whole garden catalogue. From the time the fuzz is blown from the dainty white globe, scattering the golden curse over neat green lawns, to the moment when each coin is bartered for the ball of winged seeds, the dandelion stands defiant to anyone who would attempt to check its progress.

But of all the unexpected pleasures that the Good Earth has to offer I know of few that surpass the delight of finding "volunteers"—plants that, like Topsy, "jes' grow." Last year we had a tomato vine among our zinnias—not so ornamental perhaps, but we "were supplied with salads from early August until frost, all because some little fact had found a foothold.

Then there are the seedling trees. Long before man became proficient at budding and grafting, nature provided the blessing of forests upon this earth. Wild strawberries, and plums and blackberries—how many pantry shelves have filled with preserves, thanks to the marvelous energy of the seed. And every school child knows the story of Johnny Appleseed, whose zeal was responsible for over a million acres of orchards.

The story books pass lightly over Jack's defection in exchanging his mother's cow for a bag of beans, and we are led to believe that his fairy godmother's influence was responsible. But I know many who share Jack's enthusiasm and should never be trusted with the family cow. For if they should meet a man with such wonderful seeds, their curiosity might get the better of them. And perhaps, after all, it is a divine curiosity. Who can tell?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Says Mr. Ickes

ON SECOND READING Harold Ickes' recent magazine article lambasting those who opposed the reorganization bill boils down to an angry vote of "no confidence" in the American people when their judgment conflicts with his.

Mr. Ickes says that those who protested to Congress with "the greatest number of letters, telegrams and telephone calls that history records" did so while in a "state of frenzy of sufficient intensity to deaden all power of reason and overcome all desire to be fair or just even decent."

"America," he says, "went berserk on an emotional debauch, as a result of which we were given an example of irresponsible and vindictive mob rule."

"The mob," he says, referring to the citizens who thus exercised their right of petition, "did not lack the dreadful characteristics of a veritable lynching bee."

"After its drunken frenzy over the exceedingly mild and altogether harmless reorganization bill of the President," he further says, "America probably found little to admire in itself the morning after as it regarded its own bleary-eyed appearance in the mirror."

Those Who Disagree Are 'Poor' Citizens

IT WILL BE NOTED that Mr. Ickes holds that the bill was mild and altogether harmless and that to disagree with him on that is to forfeit one's claim to conscience, good citizenship, sanity and sobriety. That is the test. Those who agree with him were wise, conscientious and honest, while those who opposed his view were bereft of reason and of all desire to be fair, just or even decent.

His resentment explodes first about the heads of certain Washington journalists and Father Coughlin, whose radio exhortation directly and solely evoked the storm which he describes as "a Ku Klux Klan of the air," "Ku Kluxism at its worst," "mob violence" and "a witch's mess of Ku Kluxism." But for them he never had any respect, anyway. It is the American people for whom he feels disappointment and shame and whose capacity for intelligent judgment he is compelled at last to doubt.

"The right to petition and the right to express oneself on any matter of common interest are precious rights that should be jealously guarded," he says. "But the right to petition Congress is based upon the presumption of a thoughtful and informed consideration of the subject matter involved."

Journalists Called 'Misinformed'

MR. ICKES does not charge that any journalist co-operated directly with Father Coughlin, but he does insist that some were misinformed and that most were dishonest. Those charges are general, however, and not specific.

Broadly, any interpretation of the objects and effects of the bill which differed from his own was the result of ignorance or dishonesty or a combination of both, and if citizens insist on heeding discussions of political issues which disagree with the views of Harold Ickes, who never was elected to any position in this Government, Mr. Ickes would consider curtailing their right to petition Congress. For, obviously, it is his view in this sample case that dissent from his belief showed lack of thoughtful and informed consideration of the subject. That would always be so whatever the issue.

Mr. Ickes neglects to mention that a Senatorial committee afterward investigated the lobbying against the reorganization bill and received from President Roosevelt authority to inspect the income tax returns of all suspects. The inquiry did not come to much. If opposition lobbyists were to be so examined, Jimmy Roosevelt, the President's son and at that time his secretary, who lobbied for the bill, might have to stand income inspection, too. And Jimmy's income, unlike the incomes of many anti-New Deal citizens, has always been held sacred. He is special.

Pity the Poor D. C. Journalist

MR. ICKES DOES have a word to say "in extenuation of the misguided zeal" of certain Washington journalists. "After all," he says, "their columns must march almost daily without a breathing spell for factual preparation and with no time off for mental fog."

This is true, and it is kind of Mr. Ickes to say so. If a journalist grows weary and his work suffers he does not enjoy a Cabineteer's privilege of spending a restful month on full pay in the Naval Hospital, with the comforts and fare of a first-class hotel, at $3.75 a day.

Split in FCC on Censorship Alarms Radio Broadcasters

Majority Continues Present License System While Craven Leads Attack on 'Punishment;' Court Refuses WLW Aid

By James D. Secrest.

Organized broadcasters yesterday indicated they still have the jitters over threats of government censorship as a new split in the Federal Communications Commission over program control was disclosed.

Coincidentally, the FCC won a victory in the United States Court of Appeals, when the six justices, meeting in special session, upheld an order of the commission, effective at 3 a. m. today, closing down the 500,000-watt super-power transmitter of the Nation's largest radio station, WLW at Cincinnati.

The court denied a restraining order which would have permitted WLW to remain on the air until its appeal is decided.

Station WLW, which has been operating under an experimental permit with 500,000 watts power since April, 1934, will not go off the air as a result of the order, since it also has a license to operate as a commercial outlet with 50,000 watts, the maximum regular broadcasting power.

Directors of the National Association of Broadcasters, representing 406 of the Nation's 700 radio stations, adopted resolutions which by implications cited threats of encroaching governmental control of radio in recent FCC actions and in the Wheeler-McNinch bill to reduce the commission to three members.

Earlier, Commissioner T. A. M. Craven, in a lone minority report, intimated that his colleagues had dodged the radio censorship issue, which recently has disturbed broadcasters, by rejecting his recommendations that the FCC discontinue the procedure of setting station licenses for hearings because of occasional complaints against programs.

The commission had adopted a majority report, submitted by Commissioners Eugene O. Sykes and George Henry Payne, in its stead. The majority report, while recommending a new method for the law department to follow investigating listener complaints, proposed no change in FCC procedure of calling stations to task.

Craven, in his dissent, said that "frequent injustices" occur as a result of the FCC system of penalizing stations whose programs have caused isolated complaints.

The commission, he said, often has no intention of revoking a station's license, even if the charges are proven true, yet a licensee "is subjected to severe punishment by the publicity and the advantage which is taken thereof by his competitors."

The commission, moreover, acts in the capacity of both prosecutor and judge in such cases. The procedure he added, has been responsible for accusations of "indirect censorship" that have been charged to the FCC.

Move to Exonerate Miss Perkins Loses In House Committee

In a bitter secret session yesterday, the House Judiciary Committee refused to drop the impeachment proceedings against Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

The move was made by Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, who asserted charges Miss Perkins had failed to enforce the deportation laws were unsubstantiated.

Members said that such a wrangle resulted that Chairman Hatton Sumners (Democrat), Texas, forced adjournment, with the Celler motion pending.

Now it's the skyscraper school!

Children will soon be going to class for the view.

New York City has accepted plans for a public school eight stories high with as many rooms as some office buildings and with four 45-passenger elevators.

The little red schoolhouse
That you and I knew
Now looks like a depot—
And acts like one, too!

The kids are to learn their three R's in a skyscraper atmosphere, whisking through revolving doors, leaping into crowded elevators and developing all the poise and patience of people who spend their days in railroad terminals.

Little Willie will find that going to school has some of the features of visiting the Empire State Building or Radio City.

And Sister Susie may even refuse a promotion on the ground that her new classroom won't have a southern exposure.

We can imagine Junior being a backward scholar because height always makes him dizzy. And it isn't hard to picture a fond parent taking a child out of school because it has no water view.

The kiddies' dream will be fulfilled when they get a skyscraper school near enough to the Yankee Stadium for the whole class to see the world's series.

Report cards will mark a boy "D" in deportment because he missed classes for two weeks and was finally found to have been going to Pennsylvania Station or the Woolworth Building by mistake.

The skyscraper school will be great stuff. Teachers won't meet except by accident, and there will be pupils who will never get acquainted with one another except over the telephone.

The day of the cozy one or two story schoolhouses, where everybody knew everybody else and where traffic jams were unheard of, appears to be over and its passing will be mourned by those who knew it.

The old-fashioned school had its limitations, and its drawbacks. But Junior never got hurt in an elevator crush there.

Unqualified Claim

By Ernest K. Lindley

Republicans Count Votes

THE REPUBLICAN National Committee has proclaimed, after analyzing the 1938 election returns, that "the Republican Party can lay unqualified claim to 21 States with a total of 221 electoral votes."

It concedes to the Democrats 23 States with a total of 226 electoral votes. It outs New York and Idaho, with a total of 51 votes, on the borderline, and describes Illinois and Montana, with a total of 33 votes, as "Democratic but close to borderline."

Add to the 221 electoral votes of States which are "unquestionably Republican" (according to the Republican National Committee) the 47 of the "borderline" State of New York and you have 268 electoral votes, two more than enough to elect a President.

This figuring undoubtedly will bring cheer to the Republicans, especially since one of their candidates for the Presidential nomination, Thomas E. Dewey, came within a hair's breadth of carrying New York last November against an able and popular Democratic Governor.

Indiana in Ranks Of Republicans?

THE REPUBLICAN analysis is replete with statistics. It would have been more impressive, I think, if some of them had been omitted. For example, you find Indiana listed as a State which is "unquestionably Republican." Yet, as the Republican statisticians show, the total vote for members of the House in Indiana last November gave the Republicans a majority of only 25,000 votes, or 50.7 per cent, of the major party vote. In the same election, the Democratic candidate for Senator won by a narrow margin. Indiana did not elect a Governor in 1938. So Indiana is "unquestionably Republican" because the Republicans had an advantage of seventenths of 1 per cent in the total vote for members of the House.

North Dakota is listed as "unquestionably Republican." In that State the Democrats elected the Governor and the Republicans elected the Senator last fall. The firm claim to North Dakota advanced by the Republican National Committee is based on the fact that both Republican candidates for the House won by handsome margins. By that test North Dakota was "unquestionably Republican" in 1932 and 1936, despite Franklin D. Roosevelt's overwhelming victory in North Dakota in both of those elections. For in both, the Republicans elected their candidates to Congress. The fact is that North Dakota, with its Non-Partisan League history and factional cross-currents is never "unquestionably" anything.

Idaho Declared 'Borderline' State

GO DOWN the list and you find that the "unquestionably Republican" States include Connecticut, New Jersey, Ohio and Wyoming, in which the Republican candidates for Congress received less than 53 per cent of the total vote. On the other hand, Idaho, where the Democrats polled 53.5 per cent of the total vote for members of the House, is put down as "borderline."

It's true that, in an astounding burst of generosity, the Republican National Committee concedes California to the Democrats, although the Republicans had an advantage of one-tenth of 1 per cent in the State-wide vote for Representatives. Of course, they lost both the Governor and the Senator.

That the Republicans made very substantial gains last November is not news. In the Congressional election in 38 States outside the solid South, they polled 470,000 more votes than the Democrats. In 27 gubernatorial elections outside the solid South they polled about 750,000 more votes than the Democrats. But in 27 Senatorial elections outside the solid South they ran 900,000 behind the Democrats. On this accounting the election was about an even break outside the solid South—which, however, contains 10 States, all securely Democratic.

I do not know what kind of statistical analysis the Democratic National Committee published after the election of 1922. In that year, the Democrats made a comeback after the overwhelming Republican victory of 1920.

Past Experiences, Pertinent, Cited

IN 1922 THE Democrats gained 75 seats in the House. In 1938 the Republicans gained 80 seats, and the Democrats lost 71 (the other Republican gains having been at the expense of third parties). The 1922 election brought the Democratic membership of the House up to 207 members, as against the 169 which the Republicans now have.

After the 1922 election, the Governors of 27 of the 48 States were Democrats. And those 27 States had 290 electoral votes, a safe majority of the electoral college. Since the 1938 election, the Republicans have the Governors in 18 States, with 188 electoral votes, considerably short of enough to elect a President.

In 1922 the Democratic National Committee could have proved that a majority of the electoral votes were "unquestionably" Democratic with statistics quite as impressive as those the Republican National Committee has mustered to prove that a majority are now Republican or on the "borderline."

But when the 1924 election returns were added up, most of the "unquestionably" Democratic States of 1922 somehow had gone Republican. The Democrats were left with only 12 States and 136 electoral votes.

On The Record

A Liberal Document

IN ITS MONDAY decision the Supreme Court outlawed the unique collaboration of the National Labor Relations Board with the trade unions to prevent employes guilty of breaking the law from suffering the penalty of discharge.

It did not outlaw the sit-down strike, because the illegality of the sit-down strike did not come into question and was not challenged by the National Labor Relations Board.

The employes who seized the corporation's plant were evicted by the sheriff, tried in the courts and most of them fined or sentenced to jail. Nobody, including the National Labor Relations Board, contested the justice of the fine or the sentences. But the board held that notwithstanding the fact that the employes had committed a criminal act against the company, the company was obliged to re-employ them with back pay.

The Supreme Court's decision supports the company's refusal to do so.

Actually, in fact, the company did re-employ most of the strikers. But it reserved its right not to take back others, and that right is upheld.

NLRB Protected 'Unlawful Acts'

THE DECISION is of great importance, because the National Labor Relations Board has, by its attitude, protected employes from suffering the full and logical consequences of unlawful acts, and this attitude of the board has been one of the reasons for industry's distrust of it.

The Supreme Court made its decision in spite of the fact that it sustained the board's ruling that the company, by its campaign to organize the plant into an independent union, by its isolation of the C. I. O. union's president from his fellow employes, by the employment of a labor spy, and by refusing to bargain collectively in February—when the C. I. O. union had been guilty of unfair labor practices.

The court's decision indicates, however, that unfair labor practices on the part of an employer are not in any sense whatever a justification for illegal practices on the part of the workers. The employer must desist from illegality and change his ways. The employes must desist from illegality and bear the consequences of discharge if they do not.

Important Bearing On Labor's Conduct

THERE ARE numerous illuminating statements in the decision that have an important bearing on the conduct of labor under the protection of the act.

The court points out that the workers themselves failed throughout the controversy with the employers to appeal to the NLRB. Thus, in the summer and fall of 1936, prior to the sit-down, the union could have immediately complained to the board that union activities were being interfered with, and that they were spied upon, and they could again have complained in February, when the corporation refused collective bargaining with the union that had a majority. But they preferred to force the issue by a sit-down strike.

This observation of the court as to the union's failure to take advantage of the protection of the act brings out one of the weaknesses of the act as a means for promoting industrial peace.

For if we are really to have peaceful settlements of disputes and the adjustment of labor-employer controversies through a Government agency, we ought to provide for arbitration of disputes in advance of a strike or lockout, while reserving to workers the right to strike if the arbitration is not satisfactory.

The appeal to arbitration ought to be open both to employers and employes. Arrangements for arbitration in advance of a strike are part of the statutes of both Sweden and Great Britain. The Swedish law creates an obligation on the part of both employers and employes to attend conferences for the purpose of collective bargaining if either demands it, and in Great Britain, although there is no legal compulsion in the matter, agreements between unions and employers invariably provide for arbitration of disputes in advance of a strike or lockout.

Most interesting was the Supreme Court's third finding.

The board based part of its contention on the general authority conferred upon it by the act to require the employer to take such affirmative action as will "effectuate the policies of the act," and argued that such action may embrace requirement of re-employment.

The court holds that while the board's authority is broad, it is not unlimited, and referred to its decision in the Consolidated Edison case, where it ruled that the board could not inflict on the employer any penalty it chose for unfair labor practices.

The court holds that the power of the board to compel administrative action is remedial and not punitive, and it reminds the board that "there is not a line in the statute to warrant the conclusion that it is any part of the policies of the act to encourage employes to resort to force and violence in defiance of the law of the land."

This recall to the limitation of scope in power is a healthy rebuke to more Government agencies than the NLRB.

Another very important part of the court's finding is that it does not uphold the board's conclusion that the employer, following an illegal strike and the lawful dismissal of the people engaged in it, must continue to bargain with the union which called it.

The employer has not the right to punish the union as such, by refusing to recognize it, but the court points out that when the illegal strikers had been discharged and new men hired, there ceased to be a basis for the conclusion that the union was still the choice of the majority of employes.

Majority Doesn't Always Remain Thus

THE COURT therefore called attention to what critics of the act, among them this column, have several times pointed out as a weakness: namely, that once a union had gotten a majority it is assumed that this majority is permanent, and no procedure exists whereby dissidents can challenge the majority. This is contrary to basic democratic principles, which are that the minority may at any time become the majority. It is in this way that in the realm of politics we provide for change and reform.

The concept of the majority which becomes permanent and is the sole agency through which the collective will may function, is the concept of the totalitarian states in the field of politics. Given the closed shop and the check-off, the union has a permanent mandate, and if this is democracy then Hitler is a democrat. Moreover, there is no compulsion of democracy inside the ruling trade union.

Senator Thomas has called for hearings on the act before the Education and Labor Committee, and it is to be hoped that this committee will take the opportunity to go into the history of labor relations in other countries, particularly in Great Britain and Sweden.

We ought to be able to take advantage of the enormous body of existing experience in this field. It is to be hoped that the committee will hear not only labor and industry but disinterested and impartial students and experts.

For if we could bring some real order into labor-employer relationships we could bring about one of the first essentials to real economic recovery in this country.

The labor relations act has fulfilled a function in establishing without question the right of workers to organize in independent trade unions and it has been responsible for a very healthy airing of the stupid and reactionary policies of some of our industries. But it is inadequate as a means of fulfilling its avowed purpose, which is to bring about industrial peace.

Radically to diminish industrial strife certainly requires independent labor organizations, but it requires more. It requires good will on the part of the employers, and that good will is only forthcoming—since employers are also human beings and no better than the rest of us—if they feel that the state, when it intervenes in the relations between themselves and their employes, is intervening in a just spirit. It requires that there be a mechanism for the arbitration and conciliation of disputes to which both sides can appeal. It requires the establishment of standards for both labor and industry by which the validity of these disputes may be judged. It requires that there shall be some certainty that contracts entered into shall be kept.

Swedish Law Clauses Cited

THE SWEDISH LAW, for instance, makes illegal all strikes, lockouts, blockades, boycotts or other hostile actions of like nature for the purpose of changing the terms of a contract during the term for which it is signed. And another statute establishes a special labor court to adjudicate questions arising under the law of collective contracts. Its seven members are appointed with a view to achieving a really judicial spirit, two representing employers, two from a trade-union panel and three neutral. The chairman and vice chairman must have had experience as court judges.

The matter of labor-employer relations must, in a democracy, be judged primarily from the viewpoint of promoting the peace, prosperity and security of all of the people and the whole of the economy.

The Supreme Court's majority opinion, with the concurring opinion of Mr. Justice Stone, is a call to a return to true liberalism—the liberalism that means limitation of scope in the granting of powers, orderly procedure and methods, and recognition of the mutuality of rights and obligations.

In that spirit the United States can meet its major problems without class cleavage and civil strife and remain a people "indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Senate Gets $250,000,000 Health Bill

Wagner Introduces Program as Vandenberg Voices Disapproval

A comprehensive national health program—involving new expenditures that jumps from $80,000,000 next year to $250,000,000 by 1942—was outlined in a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York.

Embodying many recommendations of a report President Roosevelt recently told Congress was worth "careful study," the bill would give extensive Federal aid to State programs for: (1) Child and maternal health; (2) hospital construction; (3) disability insurance; (4) general public health services, and (5) general medical care.

Senator Wagner, veteran advocate of social legislation, stated yesterday that "the fullest development of this program would bring the benefits of modern medical science, both preventive and curative, within the reach of all groups of the population, especially in rural areas and areas suffering from economic distress."

Immediate disapproval, however, was expressed by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who said he opposed "any expansion of the Government's social services until we begin to pay for those that we've got."

Fishbein Is Lukewarm

Lukewarm comment came from Chicago, where, the Associated Press reported, Dr. Morris Fishbein, secretary of the American Medical Association, observed that "the President recommended the program to the Congress for careful study, rather than immediate action, pointing out that the health of our people last year as shown by official statistics was the best in the history of the Nation."

Apparently to allay fears that the bill might lead to socialized medicine, Senator Wagner declared that "under no circumstances will the Federal Government undertake to furnish medical care." He added that "administration in all cases will be through the States, which will develop their plans only after careful surveys of local needs and conditions, and with a view to supplementing, not displacing, the existing efforts of the professions, the localities, charitbale organizations and the hospitals."

"It should be clearly understood," said Senator Wagner, "that the bill does not establish a system of health insurance or require the States to do so."

Ends 5 Years of Study

The national health bill, cast in the form of amendments to the social security act, "is the culmination of five years of intensive Federal study," Wagner said.

No new Federal payroll taxes are authorized, he pointed out, although the new appropriations authorized for next year total $80,000,000—not including appropriations to help States construct mental and tuberculosis hospitals. The authorizations will be gradually increased over a ten-year period, to be available to States that develop a program in conformity with the bill.

Federal grants would vary from 33⅓ to 66⅔ per cent of the total expenditure of the various States for public health services and hospital construction, while for general medical care programs, the Federal ratio would vary from 16⅔ to 50 per cent of total State expenditures. The proportionate share of the Federal Government would be determined for each State by the per capita income of its inhabitants.

Broken down into its component parts, the Wagner bill would authorize:

1. For maternal and child care, in States with plans approved by the chief of the Children's Bureau, $8,000,000 for the fiscal year 1940, as against an existing authorization of $3,800,000; medical care for children including the crippled and handicapped, $13,000,000, as against $2,850,000.

(2) For construction and improvement of hospitals, including aid in their maintenance for three years, in States with plans approved by the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service—$8,000,000 for 1940. The State plan must guarantee the prevailing wage to workmen employed on hospital construction. In addition to this grant, intended primarily for rural or economically distressed areas, the bill authorizes Federal aid to States in connection with construction and operation of mental and tuberculosis hospitals.

(3) For temporary disability compensation, established under State plans approved by the Social Security Board—$10,000,000 for 1940.

Rural Health Service

(4) For improvement of State public health services and training of personnel, especially in rural or economically distressed areas, with especial reference to tuberculosis, malaria, cancer, pneumonia and mental and industrial diseases—$15,000,000 for 1940, as against existing authorization of $10,000,000. The State plans must be approved by the Surgeon General. For an investigation conducted by the U. S. P. H. S., through the National Institute of Health, of health, disease, sanitation and related matters—$3,000,000 for 1940. Provision is made for reorganization of the U. S. P. H. S.

(5) For extension of State programs of medical care, including personnel training, plans to be approved by the Social Security Board—$35,000,000 for 1940.

In each case, sums varying from $500,000 to $2,500,000 are provided for administration, to a total of $6,500,000.

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—Circuit Judge Harry N. Sandler ruled today the Tampa hospital board could not ban licensed physicians from practicing at Municipal Hospital simply because they do not belong to organized medical groups.

The judge made permanent a temporary injunction issued November 4 to Dr. M. R. Winston opening the hospital to him and 13 other "contract practice" doctors who had been ousted by the board from the hospital staff.

The Very Rev. George C. F. Bratenahl, 77, dean emeritus of Washington, died yesterday at his home in Bethesda.

After serving as rector of St. Alban's Church here from 1898 until 1912, he was named canon of Washington Cathedral in 1903 and dean 13 years later. He retired in 1936.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, was "deeply shocked and grieved" by the death.

A native of Cleveland, Dr. Bratenahl was the representative of an American concern in London before he entered the ministry. He was made a deacon in 1896 and ordained two years later.

As dean of Washington, he assisted in planning the cathedral. He was a trustee of the cathedral and of the schools in the Cathedral Foundation.

Dr. Bratenahl also had served as secretary of the third department of the Episcopal Church and the Province of Washington.

He was a member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity and the University Club and held the degree of doctor of divinity.

Plea to Level Railroad Rates Held 'Ballyhoo'

New Englander Tells Senators South Has Parity on Most Items

By the Associated Press.

Senate and House committees heard yesterday a procession of witnesses condemn and approve proposed legislation to revise the railroad freight rate structure.

Many of the witnesses before a Senate Interstate Commerce Commission subcommittee urged that Congress direct the Interstate Commerce Commission to study the rate problem with a view to "leveling off" sectional differentials.

Among Senate witnesses who charged that existing freight rates were discriminatory against the South and the Southwest were Ernest O. Thompson, Texas railroad commissioner; E. R. Tanner, manager of the El Paso, Tex., freight bureau; and E. L. Hart, of Atlanta, representing the Atlanta freight bureau and the Southern Traffic League, a shippers' organization.

"Ballyhoo" Charged

Harry C. Ames, attorney for the New England Governors' freight committee, described as "ballyhoo" the protest of Southern Governors against what the latter termed "discriminatory freight rates." He declared that parity or near parity rates with the North had been accorded all but 15 Southern commodities of importance. He added that "I seriously doubt whether the total value of these 15 commodities amounts to as much as 3 per cent of the volume of production in the South from the standpoint of value."

House Bill Discussed

The House Interstate Commerce Committee heard witnesses discuss a bill by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, providing for readjustment of freight rates.

J. A. Murray, traffic manager of the Little Rock (Ark.) Chamber of Commerce, declared that discriminatory freight rates had concentrated industrial development along the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts and the Great Lakes.

He advocated that transportation rates be based on the cost of hauling freight.

Representative Hinshaw (Democrat), of California, declared Murray's theory would completely cut off the West Coast from the East as far as trade was concerned.

P. A. Frye, secretary of the Louisiana Public Service Commission, charged that rate bases adopted many years ago but not adapted to present conditions were still in use.

F. Joseph Donohue Warring's Lawyer In New Tax Trial

F. Joseph Donohue will represent Emmitt Warring, $2,000,000 numbers racket chief, in his third trial for conspiracy to defraud the Government by concealing numbers' profits, it was announced last night.

Donohue took the case after attorneys William B. O'Connell and Harry T. Whelan announced they would withdraw. Also on trial are Charles (Rags) Warring, Leo Paul Warring and Gordon L. Sadur, tax expert.

Withdrawal of the two attorneys will be presented to Justice Laws this morning in a hearing called to fix a date for the third conspiracy trial.

C. & O. Canal Songs Sought For National Folk Festival

The C. & O. Canal will be featured in the sixth annual National Folk Festival, if authorities succeed in a search launched yesterday.

"Everyone is interested in the canal," Miss Gertrude Knott, director of the festival, points out. "People want to know more about its history and its people. And when the canal parkway is completed, the old waterway will be of even greater interest."

So Miss Knott, working with a co-operative committee from the University of Maryland, has issued a call for old canal songs distinctive to the C. & O. "Certainly we must still have with us boatmen who sang the songs," she believes. "Or perhaps we can locate friends or relatives of such boatmen who may remember the words."

The Maryland committee, headed by Dr. H. F. Cotterman, of the college of agriculture, met with Miss Knott yesterday and outlined other types of material to be included in this year's festival. Sponsored by The Washington Post Folk Festival Association, the event will take place at Constitution Hall April 27, 28 and 29.

Besides boat songs, the committee is looking for old corn-husking songs which may be in use today in rural sections. In the Cumberland area, it is believed, groups still are carrying on the shape-note style of religious singing.

"And north of Hagerstown, I understand, are Mennonites, with their wealth of traditional hymns," Miss Knott added. "We should like especially to have a Mennonite family present the music of that particular sect."

A similar search in connection with last year's festival resulted in a representation of oyster shuckers from Rock Hall, Md., who sang their distinctive work songs. Miss Knott hopes this year to bring to Washington oyster shuckers and crab pickers from Crisfield, on the Eastern Shore.

Assisting Dr. Cotterman are E. G. Jenkins, Dr. Henry Brechbill, Miss Venia M. Kellar, Maylo S. Downey, Ralph Williams, Dr. L. S. Dodson and Miss A. Gwendolyn Drew, all of the University of Maryland. Both the committee and the university's extension service will comb the State for information about these and other folk groups.

Readers who are familiar with any of the folk songs Miss Knott is looking for are asked to notify the National Folk Festival, in care of The Washington Post.

'Early Break' Predicted in Bus Driver's Slaying

A man suspected of murdering Andrew Walker Straughan, Hyattsville, Md., bus driver, was under surveillance of Prince Georges County police yesterday as investigators predicted an early "break" in the death.

Although evidence against the suspect was overwhelming, State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., said there were still several angles to be cleared up.

Straughan, 36, and the father of two young children, was found unconscious and half-frozen last Thursday on the banks of Paint Branch, at Berwyn, about 20 feet from the Washington-Baltimore boulevard. He died at Casualty Hospital the next day without regaining consciousness. An autopsy revealed he had suffered a deep fracture of the skull, apparently caused by a blow from a club.

O'Conor Lauds Rep. Sasscer At Dinner Here

Gov. O'Conor and other Maryland Democratic chiefs joined last night in paying tribute to Lansdale G. Sasscer, new Representative from the Fifth District, at a testimonial banquet in the Raleigh Hotel.

The dapper young Maryland Governor, an opponent of Sasscer in the Democratic gubernatorial primary last September, predicted the new Congressman would be "a powerful figure in party affairs in the State for years to come."

Others who lauded Sasscer were Senators Tydings and Radcliffe, Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland; T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, and Representatives Byron, Cole and D'Alisandro.

Retirement Act Again Voted In Committee

Civil Service Bill Reduces Age Limit, Extends Disability

Liberalization of the civil service retirement act affecting Government employes, as provided in the Neely bill, was approved yesterday for the second time by the Senate Civil Service Committee in executive session.

Chairman Bulow also was authorized to appoint sub-committees to hold hearings on other pending civil service bills, including minimum wage proposals and bills to set up a board of appeals in disputes between Federal employes and department or bureau chiefs.

Major provisions of the Neely retirement bill are:

Reduces the age at which an employe may retire after 30 years' service to 64, 60 and 58 years, as against the present 68, 63 and 60 years.

Allows three one-year extensions when approved by the Civil Service Commission.

Provides that employes retired for disability shall be kept on retirement rolls for 12 months after recovery instead of 90 days.

Increases employes' contribution to 4 per cent of basic pay instead of 3½ per cent as at present. This is expected to save the Government $508,000 yearly.

Permits employes to deposit additional amounts of from 1 to 10 per cent of their salary for the purpose of purchasing additional annuities.

Crusading Editor Beaten; Three Jailed

Politician Is Accused Of Attempt to Silence Press in 'Lottery' Fight

By the Associated Press.

Mobile, Ala., Feb. 28.—Sam B. Powe, well-known political figure, was jailed by the Federal Government today in a roundup of persons accused of trying to break up the Mobile Press Register's antigambling crusade through coercion of an editor.

Powe, former fight promoter now active in city politics, was held under $10,000 bond fixed by United States Commissioner Alex T. Howard with the comment the charge was "of such serious magnitude it justifies such a bond."

Powe joined in jail a couple booked as George and Miriam McKenzie, and like them, he was charged specifically with conspiring "to intimidate and interfere with Henry P. Ewald in the exercise of his civil rights of free speech." Bond for each of the McKenzies was set at $5,000.

Ewald resigned last Saturday as executive editor of the Press and Register, a post in which he had been directing the paper's drive against the "numbers game."

United States District Attorney Inge said Ewald apparently was enticed to the McKenzie woman's home on the night of February 14 and there trapped by McKenzie and others and severely beaten.

Inge said his investigation convinced him the whole incident was planned by "higher ups" in the lottery seeking to kill the paper's drive through pressure on Ewald.

Radio-Active Table Salt Used To Reveal Water Around Cells

Oxford Pathologists Inject Solution Into Rabbit to Calculate Amount of Fluid Present; Aids Study of Various Diseases

By G. B. Lal

International News Service Science Editor

Oxford, England, Feb. 28.—Common salt, specifically prepared by atomic bombardment, has been used to discover unknown secrets of the heart and other key organs of the body, it was learned today at the Clarendon Laboratory here.

G. B. LAL

Drs. J. H. E. Griffiths and B. G. Maegraith, of Oxford University's department of pathology, carried out these interesting experiments, the object of which was to reveal hitherto mysterious ways water and such fluids accumulate around cells in different parts of the body.

In the treatment of many diseases of the heart, eyes and brain, the problem of how much fluid is present in spaces between cells is of great importance.

Drs. Griffith and Maegraith injected into the blood of the rabbit some sodium chloride (common table salt) which was radioactive.

Each time an explosion of the salt's sodium atom occurred within the body, an electrical machine registered a click. The machine was placed in contact with a rabbit's body.

About 22 minutes after the salt was injected into the rabbit's body a blood sample from the animal was hurling out 15 electrons per minute. Throughout the body there was enough salt to produce 2,500 electrical signals per minute.

By calculations it was found that most of the sodium in the body was present outside of the body cells, accumulated in the spaces between the cells. Heart cells, however, were an exception.

The British doctors consider their method, which can be applied to human beings, as an important tool of medicine. By its use it may be possible to learn how much fluid gathers in any parts of the body, in relation to certain diseases.

before audiences of any size

The large enrollment of Washington businessmen and Government executives for the 1939 Spring Course makes necessary the formation of an extra class.

Topnotch executives from the following firms and Government departments have taken this training: National Broadcasting Company, The Riggs National Bank, Peoples Drug Stores, Melvern Dairies, Inc.; The Hecht Company, Southern Dairies, the Hechinger Company, Call Carl, Inc.; Army War College, Army Industrial College, Treasury Department, Bureau of Standards, General Accounting Office, Department of Justice, Social Security Board, Home Owners Loan Corporation, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Department of Agriculture. In addition, members of the faculty of Washington high schools, dentists, physicians and leading attorneys. (At the meeting you will be given a booklet containing names of many of the graduates.)

Last-Minute Gifts Asked For Symphony

Drive Leaders Face $37,000 Deficit but Still Are Hopeful

Faced with a $37,000 deficit in the sustaining fund campaign for the National Symphony Orchestra, Thomas P. Morgan, jr., chairman, yesterday appealed for last-minute donations to put the drive "over the top."

Volunteer workers will meet today at 12:30 p. m. at the Carlton Hotel for the final report meeting.

Morgan said many people in the District who gave last year have not yet been approached because of illness of volunteer workers. He urged such contributors to come forward without being approached.

Morgan emphasized that a sufficient number of "small gifts" would make the drive a success. "If 10,000 people would make $2 donations the drive would gain an impetus that would assure the 1939-40 season for the orchestra," he said.

Declaring that the orchestra campaign is "far short of its goal," Harold A. Brooks, member of the board of directors, said orchestra officials were still hopeful of success.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Philadelphia Orchestra plays its fourth concert of the season in Constitution Hall Tuesday night. Conductors: George Enescu and Saul Caston. Soloist: George Enescu. Program: "Akademisches Festouvertuere" (Brahms), Concerto in D major for violin and orchestra (Brahms), Symphony No. 1 in E flat (Enescu), "Rumanian Rhapsody" No. 1 in A major (Enescu).

While Saul Caston, the young associate conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, merited approval for his poised management of the first half of last evening's program in Constitution Hall, it was upon George Enescu that the ovations burst thunderously for his reading of the Brahms violin concerto and for his authoritative and impetuous direction of his own E flat symphony and A major "Rumanian Rhapsody." The audience had come prepared to pay honor to the Rumanian musician whose versatility is exercised as a composer, a violinist, a violoncellist, an organist and a conductor, and although he did not appear in all these capacities, three of them were enough to stimulate considerable excitement. It was therefore understandable that Mr. Caston's share in the proceedings should have been taken as a matter of course.

In his manner on the podium, Mr. Caston seems to have modeled his conductorial style after that of Leopold Stokowski, whom he has had long opportunity to study from his chair as first trumpeter. Using no baton, he directs with a minimum of gesture and a commanding ease. He gave a rousing performance of the Brahms "Academic Festival" overture, and handled the orchestra in the concerto score with a fine balance of forces and a deference to the voice of the solo violin.

George Enescu read the concerto with technical restraint and a deep feeling for its poetic content. There was no display of virtuosic brilliance, but a concentration upon eloquence of phrasing. Indeed, his intentness upon interpretation was such that he seemed to be playing for himself rather than for his auditors, and his tone was occasionally too subdued for the powerful proportions of the concerto. Yet the intensity of his reading was beyond cavil, and one was impressed by its nobility of expression.

Absorption in music to the disregard of all other consideration also characterized his conducting of his own works. Standing before the musicians, he was the embodiment of energy directed solely to the disclosure of meaning. The beat of his baton was difficult to follow because the cueing of instrumental entrances was evidently more to him than metronomic precision in rhythm. Yet he evoked without seeming to do so a rhythmic subtlety which made the music vital in every measure.

His E flat symphony is a work with an assertive and tumultuous first movement, a slow movement of somewhat melancholy mood, and a brilliantly fervent finale. It is absolute music with no trace of the folk flavor which he frequently uses in other connections, and music imbued with imaginative poesy. The lento in particular is so surcharged with fanciful ideas as to have the effect of legendary narrative, a tale of some knightly deed in a land of faery. The work is beautifully scored with a keen sense of tonal color.

The A major "Rumanian Rhapsody" is by this time as familiar as any piece in the concert hall, but the composer's exposition of it revealed hitherto unnoticed minutiae in phrasing and accent. Completely national in themes and in rhythmic peculiarities, it has an irresistible elan and a captivating melodic charm.

Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

MONDAY IN LOW GEAR: 12 noon. Call from Bill Gottlieb, Post ad staff, "How about Leonard Lyons' article in The Sunday Post about Cole Porter starting a club called 'The Place' in Washington?" Answer, "Nobody knows but the Lord, Mr. Lyons and Mr. Porter and they're not telling." Bill, "Say, did you read my story about swing music in the Sunday paper?" Answer, "No. But I will if you television Cole Porter and get the lowdown about 'The Place.'" P. S. We really read Bill's swing screed before it was printed and (tee-hee!) you should've read what the copy desk cut out.

1:00. Bamboo Gardens. Harry Hooley comes over with a bunch of pictures. We pick one of the Hollywood Midgets and a beautiful girl. Out prances the "Dance Cocktails" revue—a honey if there ever was one. The girls do a beautiful toe tap, a stunning fan number in white satin gowns with huge black ostrich fans, a marvelous "circus" number—fully live up to their reputation of being the finest floor show "line" in the country. Marian Dawn sings "Deep Purple." Bernice Reed dances a la Russe, the Michaels Twins do a picture number in pastel chiffon, Margie May acro-dances smartly, Alice and Irene shiver in a rumba. The Hollywood Midgets, Gus and Leon (each about 36 inches high) top the show with a "short-weight" boxing match that's as funny as many of Mr. Joe Turner's wrestling matches. A great show. Manager Huey Liang asks if we don't want a picture of the girls. "It shows them just standing in a row," we object. "But they're standing on their toes," says Mr. Liang. "Even if they were standing on their heads—" we begin. "Oh, whatever you like," finishes Mr. Liang with contained Celestial ire.

1:45. The Hour Glass. "We're having another gorgeous style show on Wednesday," says Vincent Gallagher. "And the Army basketball team came in to celebrate its victory over Navy. I think that's rubbing it in." Mr. Gallagher is an Annapolis man.

2:00. Madrillon. Arrangements for having a picture taken of the new Van Sickler-Shook two-piano play-all-the-time orchestra that will make its bow to the public tomorrow night.

2:30. Call to inquire about the new Neptune Room's construction. Told that everything is coming along beautifully. "Is it possible that you're thinking of changing its name to 'The Place'?" we inquire. "Huh?" is the astounded answer.

4:00. Mayfair. Beverly Stull wailing about aches and aches. It seems that she went swimming on Sunday for the first time in two years. Louanna properly elated over her new spring outfit, a chic tan three-piece suit with japonica (rust-tan to you) hat and accessories. Enter Milo Dodd, Post ad staff, waving a small clipping. Yes, it's that paragraph about Cole Porter's "The Place." All agree that the late Heigh Ho is the logical spot, speculate on whether Heigh Ho's failure to reopen was due to rental terms disagreement, license trouble or just because Mrs. Leiter decided not to 'low no swingplayin' 'round her neighborhood. It's finally decided that Mrs. Leiter probably is going to let Mr. Porter reopen Heigh Ho as "The Place" on condition that he plays only his own music. Enter Hi Hat's Angie Rodante wearing an amazing little hat of purple straw, full of plans for her approaching tonsilectomy vacation. Angie suggests that we call Oscar about the selection of the singer who will "sub" for her.

5:00. Call Hi Hat's Oscar who says, "We're going to hold competitive try-outs for the new singer on Wednesday afternoon and the final auditions on Thursday evening. Both affairs will be fine parties and lots of fun. Come up and be a judge." No thanks, Oscar. Every time I pick up a paper I read about some judge getting in trouble.

A Dowager Gives Advice

"My dear, would you mind if I said something rather frank to you? . . . Oh it's nothing alarming, it's only that—well I'm very anxious for you to get off on the right foot in Washington . . .

"Oh, no, no, you haven't done anything really wrong, but there are a few little things—well for one thing, I don't like your address . . . Oh yes, of course it's perfectly respectable, and a lovely apartment and all that, but—well what I mean is, the correct address is just one of the most important things here for a newcomer. Now personally, I don't care a snap of my fingers about such things, it's just simply that other people judge you by them. Now if you would like, I can suggest several sections that I think would—well look a little better on your stationery.

"By the way, where are you going to church? . . . Oh—I see . . . Yes, I know all your family have, but—well the thing is since you are starting fresh here, don't you think it might be a little better to select a church—well, that more of your friends might attend? Now, I'd be the last person on earth to be snobbish about religion but—well, I'm just thinking of the connections your children will make . . . Yes, you see the church is a very important factor in one's life.

"Another thing—I suppose, of course, you'll get into some form of charity work right away . . . Yes, I think you should. Yes indeed, I think every woman should give some of her time—and of herself—for the good of others. And by the way, I could give you some suggestions about which charity it might be best to get in—I mean to help with.

"Have you been to the symphony yet or any of the musicales? . . . Oh—I see. Well, I'm very found of the theater myself, but I do think every woman should be a music lover . . . No, you can't afford to leave music out of your life . . . It broadens your perspective so, brings out the finer things in you. Now I'd be glad to suggest some musical events that everybody—well that I think you would enjoy.

"There's one little thing I hesitate to bring up . . . Well that's sweet of you. The thing is, my dear, that you just can't do some of the things here you did at home. Now, for instance, that package you're carrying. Don't you think it would have been better to have had it sent? . . . Oh, a book! Oh well, then just take off the wrapping. It's all right to carry a book—without the wrapping.

"Now another little thing. Didn't I see you Thursday noon coming out of Dunker's . . . Oh, you had lunch there! . . . Oh yes, they do have wonderful waffles but—well what I mean is it's all right to go there after the theater or after a concert for waffles, but—well, one lunches at Gaston's.

"Oh yes, something else—have you done anything about a summer place yet? . . . Oh, of course, I know you can't afford a real summer home, but what I mean is you can surely get a little piece of ground down by the beach or out in the country somewhere and put up some kind of a little shack, —that is, cottage . . . Oh, yes, I know it's really more comfortable to stay at home, but the thing is—well you really ought to have two addresses. And then, of course, you simply have to get out of town somewhere in the summer.

"Now when you start out entertaining . . . Oh you are! Well who are you having? . . . Who? . . . Oh yes . . . Oh yes . . . Who is she? . . . Oh I see. Well just those? . . . Oh yes, I really think small parties are much nicer but—well you are not likely to attract much social notice through them. Now, please understand me. Nobody dislikes newspaper publicity more than I do but—well it's just one of those things we have to put up with.

"Now about those guests you're having. They're perfectly lovely girls, but—well I'd think you should try to cultivate people who are a little more widely known here . . . Oh, I know they're very interesting and worth while, but nobody KNOWS them. Why, if they were even terribly smart looking it would be something, but they're not . . . Oh no, of course you don't want to go back on your friends but—well you've got to look at these things in a broad light. You've got to think of your children's future, your husband's connections . . .

Yes . . . Now, understand me. I'm not snobbish in the least. There's nothing I'd like to do so much as to live my own life, just do the things I want to do, have around me the people I like, but—well, my dear, only people with a great deal of money can afford to be eccentric that way.

"What? . . . Oh well you're prefectly welcome for whatever advice I can give you. And please don't misunderstand me. It's not that I care at all about these things I've mentioned. No! It's just that other people do."

Soft Woolen Town Suit

The nimble girl above wears an indispensable black woolen suit. Its fabric is soft and fine—detailing is in the dressmaker tradition. The slimly buttoned jacket ends in white pique piping for the collarless neckline. Pipings of snowy pique outline pockets and sleeves. The simple wearability of this town suit gives it immediate charm under winter furs. Accents of white gloves, a bright patent-leather handbag and a little white pique hat change it into a faultless early spring companion

Your Figure Madam

——By Ida Jean Kain

Overweight Does Not Run in Families; Reducer Proves Fallacy of This Theory

IF YOU think overweight runs in the family and that nothing can be done about it, you will be intrigued with this story of a reducer with similar convictions who set out to prove them.

"My family have always been large-boned people," She explains, and I was sure that I was constitutionally overweight. I only went on the diet to prove you wrong, but I've failed. I've reduced!"

I weighed 230 pounds for my height of five feet eight inches and had been trying to buy a dress with a very limited pocketbook and a luxury figure—size 48!"

She Lost 10 Pounds

And you may recall that the promise was held out that on the diet you could lose ten pounds in three weeks. This was too much! The letter continues, very frankly, "Expecting to make a prevaricator out of you, I started it. I lived right up to the rules and didn't cheat once. And I did lose the ten pounds and am still going strong!

"It is fascinating to step on the scales and see yourself steadily losing. And it hasn't been work at all! I take kicking, bending and stretching exercises every morning and afternoon and follow the balanced diet with the vitamin capsules daily. My weight loss now averages a pound a week. I have done very little backsliding and am quite proud of mystelf.

"Now that I am down to 194 pounds and my measurements are so much better, I wear a size 44, but I would like to lose another 20 pounds and get down to a size 40. It's such a grand and glorious feeling! My friends tell me, though, that I should stop for a while and I don't want to undermine my health. What do you think?"

Well, to begin with, I think more of you constitutional overweights should have the courage of your convictions and honestly try to reduce. Most of you would, I am sure, be as elated to find you can lose as this reducer did.

Not Family Trait

One thing you may be certain of—overweight does not run in families! Some traits that influence weight are shared by families—large frames, an appreciation of good food and easy going dispositions (And don't do anything to change that easy going disposition!) Your build and temperament may be such that you do not burn many calories, but unless you eat too much food you can't possibly be overweight—and that goes for families, too!

But, back to our Number One Reducer for this week. After losing as much as 36 pounds it is a wise plan to wait for a month before losing any more weight. During this period the diet should be kept at the number of calories which will hold the weight where it is, and exercise should be continued. This respite tends to stabilize weight at the new low level and gives the skin a chance to adjust to the smaller proportions.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Blaming Nature, Devoted Suitor Admits Being Disloyal to Sweetheart; She, Outraged, Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Are all men fools? I have been hesitating to write you concerning my problem, hoping future association with young men would correct a past disillusionment. However, the same thing has happened again. It's just this: I have been terribly in love with a young man for three years. We planned to be married and I thought the world of him because he was so decent to me. But just the other night, while at a gay party, we had an argument. One thing led to another and all at once he became very serious and told me, point blank, that he had been indulging in a questionable relationship with another girl. The shock almost killed me.

Remember, it was the second shock of the kind. He claimed, as did the first, that he respected me to the nth degree, but that fellows just can't help their emotions. They have to have some outlet, and that's where the other girl comes in. He also said that 99 out of 100 men do as he has done, because they're made that way. He thinks that I should understand, and appreciate his frankness.

But must I accept this lame excuse and go on as if nothing unusual had happened? My common sense says, "No. There must be some truly decent men in this world." But how am I to know they are decent, if I can't tell through my own experiences with them? Please don't gather from this that I consider myself a saint. I have known weak moments, many times, but I have learned to control myself. Why can't they? Is respect the only thing that rewards a good girl? Shouldn't she have the only right to the man who wants to marry her? I would appreciate your comments and advice. I don't want to give him up, but what in the world can I do, in these circumstances?

HEARTBROKEN.

The Need of Education

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Your family physician, if you have one, is at once better qualified and better situated than I to discuss this type of complaint with the necessary degree of helpful frankness. Given a fair measure of self-understanding—that is, a working knowledge of his physical and psychological processes, and their inextricable interrelationship—a normal man in love and engaged to be married, neither feels the need nor succumbs to the temptation to be unfaithful to his fiancee.

However, the consensus among advanced students of medicine and related branches of science today is that man is not, essentially, a monogamous creature. They hold—in the sense of conceding and being prepared to deal with the fact—that his biologically creative impulses are, almost always, in tense conflict with the "thou-shalt-not" restraints imposed upon him by church and society. Without condoning, de-of affairs as they see it, medical men believe—as one man puts it—believes—as one man puts it—that "given the time, the place and the person, the average man is going to transgress the laws of society and obey the laws of nature—for the reason that he is still closer to nature than he is to that civilized spiritual and social ideal which he has set for himself, and toward which he is striving."

They believe that if women seem less prone to sensual gratification than men, if they yield less readily and generally to the temptations of the flesh, it is due in some part, at least, to practical considerations dictated by feminine fear of physical and social consequences (of pregnancy and scandalous exposure, to be explicit) such as could never be visited upon, nor exact the same cost of, the man. Such fears on the woman's part serve both to inhibit and to repress her emotional responses in a given situation—so that, sometimes, she believes it is her spiritual nature that is in the ascendancy, when, in reality, it is rather fear of suffering or detection.

It is human nature, as we all know, to make a virtue of necessity; and it may be that, through the ages, woman has somewhat self-deceptively tended to glorify her necessitous defense of chastity as a voluntary gesture of purest spiritual idealism. This is not to say that some persons—indeed, many persons—are not truly spiritual in essence. For they are. They live rather effortlessly above the grosser needs of their more fleshly fellows. Yet their reaction to the spectacle of these lesser souls fumbling among the husks, is invariably one of compassion rather than of outraged contempt.

However' if some women make undue virtue of necessity, so do some men make undue necessity of what is nothing more or less than pampered viciousness. It is conceivable that a man might fall from grace, if and when tempted beyond his spiritual strength to resist the promptings of the flesh; but it is altogether inexcusable—even according to the laissez faire code of the easy going average citizen and cheerful sinner—that an engaged man would be disloyal to his fiancee to the extent of giving unbridled rein to licentious impulses in the name of physical necessity. I am not convinced, however, that your fiance represents so extreme a case or attitude. More likely, he is just a normal man—as science defines him—essentially not monogamous, and therefore fairly susceptible to sensual invitation. Probably his greatest shortcoming is his lack of education—in the fields of both self-knowledge and polite social interchange.

If he better understood his own nature, he would know better how to deal, effectively and self protectively (where his life's happiness is concerned), with his own emotions, to the end of keeping them under happier control; and if he were acquainted with the forms of graceful deportment, he would never have defied you with his peccadillos. But I think, too, that you have at least as much to learn in both fields as he has. Given more understanding, you would have experienced less shock, and, more importantly, you would never have precipitated—as you probably did—the quarrelsome debate which turned your world upside down for a second time.

It is not for me to say whether you should or should not marry him. That is for you to decide, in the light of your own conscience, and in the light of such greater understanding and broader education as you may acquire; and which you must acquire, if you are not to go through life being constantly pained and shocked.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Planning Aids Hostess to Serve Without Maid

Small Tables And Tea Wagon May Be Used

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

One place where many a hostess strikes a snag is how to make a beautifully set dining table accord with the idea of a maidless household, That does take a bit of doing, but the answer is in forethought. You will need, first of all, a side table at your elbow. Use it for serving dishes or for dishes you're finished with. Any nice table will do. I've seen a low butterfly maple table used gracefully for this purpose. A tea wagon works very well, too. But my choice is a tiered dumbwaiter table. Partly because it is such a graceful piece in its own right; partly because it provides such convenient shelf space. Then, it is useful between times for ornaments.

The dumb-waiter table is grand for serving informal living-room refreshments, too. When you are serving tea, coffee or cocoa from a low table in front of your chair, a dumb-waiter table at your arm is a good place for plates of sandwiches, cakes and nuts. If you're having cocktails, it has the efficiency of three tables for hors d'oeuvres.

The dumb-waiter table was first made in England in the eighteenth century and was quickly copied in France, Germany and America. It belonged to the age of mahogany. Chippendale made nice ones that are reproduced today by manufacturers. Another interesting one, also available in copies, was made in America around 1760-75, influenced, no doubt, by Thomas Jefferson, the architect and designer, whose love for classic dignity had such a profound effect on American furniture of the period.

Net Curtains Are Airy, Cool

One way to get airily cool windows for spring and summer is to use open weave curtains, letting a single pair or two panels of lace net act as both draperies and glass curtains. A suggestion is to choose a style with a substantial border design, and hang the curtains on the window frame, outside of the inner window casing, having the curtain wide enough to fall in full folds over the window glass as well as over the side frames of the window. They give the effect of draperies while serving really as sheer curtains.

A Woman's New York

——By Alice Hughes

Ursula Parrott Soon to Take Spouse No. 4; Richard Aldington, Author, to Live in U. S.

AS REPORTED before, I am more than a little interested in the fact that Ursula Parrott is about to marry her fourth husband, in the person of Coster Schermerhorn, middle-aged scion of one of the old New York Dutch families. My interest is largely due to the fact that I have known this high-powered fiction mill for more years than I care to mention. As a matter of fact, we had apartments in the same dingy brownstone when we were both recovering from first marriages—Kitty from her reporter spouse named Lindesay Parrott, and I from never mind whom. Believe me, nothing can bring two girls closer together than such an episode.

ALICE HUGHES

When I first knew her, she was not Ursula at all, but just Kitty, a little Boston-Irish girl five feet tall and full of ginger. She was just beginning her first and most successful novel called "Ex-Wife"—in which I can truly say, with disgusting modesty, that I was the only laudable character. Since that time Kitty's success as a fiction writer has been phenomenal. At times her income has reached $100,000 a year. She also has run through two other husbands, and is deeply devoted to her 15-year-old son, Lindesay. Kitty scorns the notion that she is marrying Schermerhorn for social position. "I am marrying Coster because I think he is the nicest man in the world," is her verdict. Well, Ursula should know—and a girl who can knock out popular fiction as fast and as well as she can should give a hoot about marrying a descendant of one of our burghers!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Local citizens have been noticing enormous crowds hovering around the Sherry-Netherlands Hotel, a big hostelry at the southern brink of Central Park. But they looked in vain for a good fight. Incredible though it may seem, these hundreds of young people are merely hanging around the inn in the hope of getting a glimpse of that suddenly-popular 17-year-old movie actor named Mickey Rooney. As a veteran observer of Hollywood visitors, I have never witnessed larger crowds of name-chasers, not even in the cases of Robert Taylor and Clark Gable. Which merely proves that personal beauty is not necessary to draw these strange young creatures . . .

It is thrilling news that one of my great English literary heroes is coming to the United States to live. He is Richard Aldington, who over ten years ago wrote one those books you never forget. This one was called "Death of a Hero," and I'd like to strangle with my bare hands the villain who stole or borrowed my copy and never returned it. Aldington is bringing his wife and child here to make a permanent home, feeling that the present condition of Europe makes writing impossible there. Just another case of their loss, our gain—and we are certainly the richer for another first-rate literary man.

A few years ago Hollywood attracted John Davis Lodge, of the Boston Lodges—and right good he was, too. He soon married one of the fabulous Braggiottis, by name Francesca—and suddenly the Lodge family disappeared from our scene. Now, just as suddenly, they have reappeared after nearly four years of acting in Europe. But they won't stay, for Lodge and his wife, with their little girl have carved out a European stage and screen career for themselves, and seem to prefer it to our native brand.

Hundreds Pay Tribute To Saito at Embassy

'A Buddhist Never Dies' an Attache Declares as Diplomats and State Officials Eulogize Late Envoy

By Hope Ridings Miller,

The Post Society Editor.

"HIROSI SAITO is not dead. A Buddhist never dies."

So said an attache of the Japanese Embassy yesterday at the ceremony for his country's late envoy. The body lay in state in a room crowded to the walls with diplomats, officials and the most lavish display of flowers Washington has seen in many a day.

HOPE R. MILLER

The attache was one of many who formed a double line extending from the door of the reception room to the entrance. His statement had been whispered in answer to a woman's question, "Since Mr. Saito was not a Christian, where according to his belief, will he go after death?"

"He is not dead," repeated the attache. And then silence. From the adjoining room came a voice eulogizing the man in whose honor the crowd had assembled. Standing by his casket were three small figures—Mme. Saito garbed in black, her daughters in white. Dry-eyed and serene they stood . . . watching the long line of notables file by . . . bowing with oriental courtesy when friends turned to bow to them.

Every embassy and legation, the State Department and many other circles were represented in the throng that attended the ceremony. Luncheon parties broke up early so that guests could be at the Japanese Embassy on time. Long, sleek limousines filled with diplomats in formal attire virtually stopped traffic for blocks in front of the embassy. Residentials arrived in droves and official society made up a sizeable section of the crowd.

"If people only would be as kind in life as they are after death," said one diplomatic hostess after the ceremony. "Half of the people here today wouldn't go near Mr. Saito the last time he attended a White House diplomatic reception."

What she said probably was true. His last White House reception was last year shortly after the sinking of the Panay. But the frigid attitude maintained by guests toward Mr. Saito and other members of his staff was merely a gesture of protest against his country; it was not a personal affront. For there was no doubt about it, the man whose widow watched yesterday as hundreds paid tribute at his casket was one of Washington's most respected diplomats, despite the fact that he represented a country whose policies were widely unpopular.

MME. ERTEGUN'S luncheon yesterday made you forget the day outside was anything but pleasant. From cocktails to Turkish coffee it moved merrily along until mid-afternoon. Bowls of cut flowers were arranged in the spacious drawing room, where an open fire furnished an additional note of color.

The company sat at a long table which was decorated with three silver bowls brimming with anemone. Mme. Ertegun, wearing a smart black frock trimmed with a collar of turquoise, had on her right Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, one of the few women who can wear an all-black ensemble without looking drab in it—and on her left, Mrs. Millard Tydings, whose smart black straw hat was trimmed with red feathers and swathed in a veil.

Mrs. Mark Bristol sat at the opposite end of the table, and up and down each side were a number of diplomatic and official hostesses, as well as a scattering of "residentials."

NO MATTER what you started talking about, conversation sooner or later turned on either Mrs. Roosevelt's resignation from the D. A. R., or Martha Dodd's book on Germany. As usual, members of the Diplomatic Corps smiled, and said little on either subject, preferring to talk about the weather. But others expressed themselves without hesitation about the First Lady and the D. A. R. As for the Dodd book—everybody who hadn't read it said she hoped to soon; each one, that is, except Baroness von Below. "I wouldn't read it for anything," she said, by way of closing the subject.

INTO TOWN yesterday for a brief visit, Mrs. Dorothy Green, daughter of Mme. Irimescu, will return to New York early today. She came to attend the concert last evening when Georges Enescu, Rumanian artist, appeared with the Philadelphia Symphony.

Shortly after she arrived yesterday afternoon, I dropped by the Rumanian Legation for a cup of tea with her. She has promised repeatedly to come to Washington for a longer visit some time before the season is over. "Later . . . later," is what she always says. "Perhaps in the spring . . ." is what she is saying now. Meanwhile, the Minister and Mme. Irimescu are toying with the idea of going South next month for a vacation in Florida. They may make it a real vacation trip and go on out to Arizona to visit Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Odlum on their Arizona ranch.

Mrs. Kincheloe Entertains

Mrs. David H. Kincheloe, of New York, who has been widely entertained since she arrived in Washington for a visit several days ago, held a luncheon-bridge yesterday at the Congressional Club in honor of her daughter, Mrs. James Henry Davis, wife of Lieut. Davis, U. S. N., of Annapolis.

Mrs. Kincheloe wore a frock of light green crepe with a black straw and green veil, set off with black accessories. Her corsage was of gardenias and orchids. Mrs. Davis wore a light beige two-piece suit, worn with a pirate hat of felt in matching shade, and a corsage of gardenias.

Luncheon guests were at a long table decorated with four large bouquets of blended spring flowers at intervals on table with sprays of acacia and fern down the center.

The guests were Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, Mrs. Maurice Thatcher, Mrs. Fred Purnell, Mrs. Tilman Bacon Parks, Mrs. Frank Morrison, Mrs. Conrad Syme, Mrs. Thomas D. Espils Fete Aranha, Envoy

The newly arrived Ambassador of Brazil and Senora de Martins shared the spotlight with that country's Foreign Minister, Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, at a dinner given in the latter's honor last evening by the Argentine envoy and Senora de Espil. There were 30 in the company.

Senora de Espil will leave today for a week's visit to Mississippi and Tennessee.

Yesterday Dr. Aranha was host at a luncheon at the Brazilian Embassy in honor of Senor Martins. Several men were asked to meet him, among them Warren Lee Pierson, director of the Export-Import Bank; former Ambassador Breckinridge Long, Emil Hurja, John Caswell, Richard Harrison, Secretary of the United States Embassy at Rio de Janeiro; Paul McKee, of Portland, Oreg., who knew Dr. Aranha in Brazil, and Souza Dantes of the Minister's party.

Betrothal Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Leonidas J. Calomiris have announced the engagement of their daughter, Constance, to Peter Keron, formerly of Issari, Greece, but now of Washington. The date of the wedding will be announced later.

Party for Rumanian Conductor At Legation Follows Concert

Minister and Mme. Radu Irimescu Hosts at Supper Honoring Georges Enescu, Guest Leader of Orchestra

After the curtain was "rung down" on the concert last evening at Constitution Hall, not all the silk hats and mink coats went right straight home. Several of them ordered "James" to drive to the Rumanian Legation, where the Minister and Mme. Radu Irimescu were hosts at a supper honoring Georges Enescu, their compatriot. Surrounded by admirers at the party, Mr. Enescu had been surrounded even earlier in the evening by the Philadelphia Orchestra, of which he was guest conductor and soloist.

Others attending the Irimescus' spread included other artists on the program, members of the legation staff, and a few of their intimate friends, and Mme. Irimescu's daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Green, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Rutherford reversed the order and were hosts last evening at a dinner preceding the concert. Their guests included their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Patterson Campbell, of Denver, and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will leave this afternoon to return to their home in Denver.

Among those who had spoken for boxes for the Philadelphia fete at Constitution Hall were Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Adolph Miller, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. William R. Castle, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mrs. George A. Garrett, and Mrs. Edwin B. Parker.

Also Mrs. F. A. Keep, Mrs. William Becker, Miss Alice Clapp and Mrs. William Crozier.

A few of the names on the imposing line-up of patrons and patronesses were those of Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard, Mrs. Foster Adams, Mrs. F. Lamot Belin, Mrs. Henry Berliner, Mrs. Edward B. Burling, Mrs. Carl Droop, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin and Mrs. George Cabot Lodge.

A few more: Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mrs. Ord Preston, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. C. C. Shiffeler, Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

THE POLISH ambassador, Count Potocki, and his brother, Count Alfred will be honor guests at a men's dinner to be gvien tonight by Harry Worcester Smith at his home "My Hunting Box," following the hunt of the Piedmont pack. The Polish counts will follow the hounds. The ambassador is master of the Pomozang Hunt and his brother is M. P. H. of the Lancut Hounds, both in Poland.

Among the guests tonight will be Archibald Cary Randolph, M. F. H. of the Piedmont Hounds; Daniel Sands, M. F. H. of Middleburg Hunt, Edmund Horgan, M. F. H. of Cobbler Hunt, Raymond Guest, M. F. H. of Rock Hill Hunt, Alvin V. Baird, former master of Cobbler Hunt; Richard Kirkpatrick, acting master of Warrenton Hunt; George Robert Slater, jr., acting master of Piedmont Hunt; Louie Leith, famous horseman and huntsman; State Senator Thomas Glasscock, Paul Mellon, Charles Cushman, Stacy Lloyd, Crompton Smith and Gerry Webb.

THE HUNTING country, as well as New York and Long Island society, is widely interested in the engagement of Miss Bettina Belmont to Newell J. Ward, jr.

While no date has been set for the wedding, it will probably take place in June in Middleburg, and will be one of the largest and most important social events of the early summer season in Virginia. It has been rumored for some time that Miss Belmont and Mr. Ward were engaged, for the two have been constantly together in the hunting field.

Mrs. Arthur White, mother of Miss Belmont, decided to announce her daughter's engagement on Monday night at a small dinner party before leaving today with Mrs. Harry Frost for several weeks at Clearwater, Fla. Mr. and Mr. Frost will join them next week.

Miss Belmont is now at her home, Chilton, near Middleburg, and is foxhunting daily with the various packs. She and Mr. Ward will ride in the Point to Point races to be held over the estate of Paul Mellon in the Piedmont Hunt territory on Saturday, March 11.

MISS BELMONT is the daughter of the late Raymond Belmont, of New York, and a granddaughter of the late August Belmont. She attended the Hill School, Middleburg, and the Fermata School in Aiken, S. C. Her debut in December, 1936, at the North Wales Club was one of the largest parties of the season.

MRS. WHITE is a member of neighboring Virginia packs and of Meadowbrook Hunt on Long Island. She was formerly Miss Carolyn Hulbert, of Cincinnati.

Miss Belmont is lovely at all times, but particularly so in the hunting field, when she wears formal hunting attire of dark biue habit, topper, and veil. She is a member of Middleburst, Piedmont and Orange County hunts.

Mr. Ward is the son of Mrs. Newell J. Ward, of Southampton, Long Island, and the late Mr. Ward. His grandfather, the late Edgar B. Ward, of East Orange, N. J., was founder of the Prudential Insurance Co. He was educated at the Stuyvesant School, Warrenton, attended the University of Virginia and studied abroad. He came to live in Virginia in 1931, purchased a place, and is engaged in farming on his estate, Newmary Farm, near Middleburg. He is an honorary whip of Middleburg Hunt.

Cardenas, Franco's Envoy in U. S., Tipped as New Ambassador

IT probably won't be long before Jaun de Cardenas, Franco's registered agent here, abandons his luxurious suite at the New York Ritz, where he has made his headquarters since the war began, to move into the even more luxurious Spanish Embassy here. With Dr. Fernando de los Rios making definite plans to teach in this country, chances are that Cardenas will be chosen as the new government's envoy in Washington, when and if it is recognized by the United States.

Washington's recollections of Cardenas date way back to 1918, when he was attached to the embassy here. He became famous for the gay bachelor parties he gave and for the goat which he kept tethered in his back yard. The latter belonged to a Spanish couple who worked for him, and its purpose was to supply milk for their baby.

Senora de Cardenas, a Rumanian, is an expert in flower arrangement, having studied it in Japan, where that art is so involved that it can take 7 years to master. She met her husband at the first dinner party she attended after coming here to visit here brother, Frederick Nano, the Counselor of the Rumanian legation. The couple were married six weeks later.

Cardenas has been Ambassador here twice—the second time he was appointed was just before the revolution broke out. Since then he has been hovering about New York, with frequent trips to Washington. He and his wife were gay leaders of the smart set during their residence here. The years since have seen a number of tragedies in their lives, greatest of which was the loss of their young and only son.

The present Ambassador, Dr. de los Rios, and his wife have confined their social activities here largely to the group which is sympathetic to and able to help the loyalist cause—and this group is not the smart set. Dr. de los Rios even flew to the Dominican Republic once to help raise funds for refugees. Their pretty and brilliant daughter, Laura, obtained a job last autumn teaching at Wellesley College, after having studied for her Ph. D. in literature at Columbia.

INSPIRED by the success of the French film "Mayerling," a company in France is about to follow up with a movie of the life of the nephew of Emperor Franz Joseph, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, whose assassination at Sarajevo precipitated the World War. This acting plum will go to none other than the New England born John Davis Lodge, who has been visiting his brother, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, and his mother, Mrs. George Cabot Lodge. The former lawyer, who has also acted in Italian and Hollywood films, will sail early in the spring to fulfill his new role. Part of the movie will be set in Egypt, where the unfortunate Archduke spent several years in his youth.

HALF a dozen young ladies are being kept busy licking stamps and addressing envelopes for the 10,000 announcements which Homer S. Cummings and William Stanley are sending out for the opening of their new law firm.

SMALL DINNERS, always Washington's favorite entertainment, are rampant this week. Last night there were more than usual, with one of the most pleasant that which Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken gave at their home on Benton place. It was a small party, the guests being Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss Coonley and Commander and Mrs. Hamilton V. Bryan.

ODD AND ENDS: Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong will be hosts at dinner tomorrow before the performance of the Civic Theater's play, "The Watched Pot." Later they will bring Director F. Cowles Strickland and members of the cast back to their homes for supper . . . Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock has a dinner scheduled for Saturday . . . And Mrs. Harold Hinton returns today after a stay in New Orleans and a visit with her sister in Chattanooga, their home town.

Among the guests were the Charge d'Affaires of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Huneeus, the Counselor of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Walter A. Riddell, Mrs. James McHugh, E. W. Pavenstedt and several members of the German Embassy staff.

Dr. Thomsen hopes to join his wife in Florida for a brief vacation soon.

Member Drive Planned By Needlework Guild

Extension of Service Also Proposed; Group Meets Today to Distribute Gifts to Washington's Needy

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The First Needlework Guild of Washington has been active this year in carrying on its unheralded work among the needy. Under its new officers, who were installed last month, headed by Mrs. William E. Safford, it is planned to increase its membership and extend its service.

This morning, as on other Wednesdays through the year, Mrs. W. Elkins Reed, the custodian of supplies, and Mrs. F. H. Barrow, her assistant, will be at the offices of the Washington Cathedral to distribute articles to members who have had requests for aid. If there are many requests in one week, the custodians call on other members to assist them in preparing the bundles for distribution.

Mrs. John O. Mahon Was Founder

The guild was organized Wednesday, January 30, 1889, by Mrs. John O. Mahon, modeled after that formed in England a few years earlier by Lady Wolverton. A report of the annual meeting a year later lists the officers as Mrs. Justice Harlan, president; former Senator Mrs. Pomeroy, Mrs. Admiral Murray, Mrs. General Greely, and Mrs. Samuel J. Randall, vice presidents; Mrs. John B. Wright, secretary, and Miss Fanny G. Childs, treasurer.

The original plan was to have the members make the garments to be distributed among the needy but this proved impractical as they suited the fancy of the makers rather than the needs of the recipients. The guild gives only new garments and endeavors to provide articles which are suitable in type as well as size.

For many years, Mrs. Robert Craig, daughter of Mrs. Mahon, was president of the guild and, before her death, arranged that the Bishop of Washington should be made the warden, in order to insure the perpetuation of the organization. The Cathedral offices were made available as a distribution center and this facilitated the work of assembling and classifying the supplies. Previously Mrs. Craig's home had been headquarters.

No Lines Drawn In Charitable Work

The guild draws no line as to creed or race in its charitable works but aids anyone whose need is known to a member. There is no red tape to delay the response to calls for help and, in case of a fire or other emergency, the aid is prompt.

A minimum membership fee is an amount equivalent to the purchase of two new useful garments for a man, woman or child. There are only two meetings a year, that in January, when officers are elected, and that in April, when the year closes.

Present officers, in addition to Mrs. Safford, are Mrs. Edmund H. Parry, vice president; Mrs. Henry Ewing, recording secretary; Mrs. L. W. Eugster, treasurer; Mrs. William Wheatley, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Reed, custodian, and Mrs. Barrow, assistant custodian.

Jewish Agency Plans Luncheon

Mrs. Louis Mayer, of the Jewish Social Service Agency, addressed the February meeting of the Washington Chapter of the National Home for Jewish Children yesterday at the Jewish Community Center. She told how the local charities committee of the chapter, which provides milk and cod liver oil for needy children, aids the agency in its work.

Mrs. A. D. Solomon, president of the chapter, introduced the speaker and presided at the business meeting. Plans were made for the third annual donor luncheon to be given May 9, at the Mayflower Hotel. Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, will be the guest speaker and Mrs. Fannie E. Lorber, national president, is expected to come from Denver, where the home is situated.

Mrs. Albert Jacobson, director of "The Swinging Buckeroos," a musical show to be presented at the luncheon, has issued a call for members to make up the cast.

Mrs. Ellis Kossow is chairman of the luncheon. A rummage store has been opened at 514 Fourth street southwest which will provide a means for many members to earn their luncheon tickets.

Dr. Manger Addresses Club

Solidarity in the Americas and continental co-operation were outstanding features of the Lima Conference, Dr. William Manger, of the Pan American Union, told the international relations section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase yesterday. He believes the declaration made at the conference will be effective.

A study of events in other parts of the world is being made by the Pan American Union, he said, to determine their effect on the South American republics. He declared the Lima Conference and those preceding it had brought all of the countries in this hemisphere nearer to unanimity of viewpoint.

Dr. Manger urged more general teaching of Spanish in schools of this country as an aid to international understanding and intercourse.

Following his talk, Mrs. Charles B. Imlay, a club member, told of her travels in Europe last summer in seven countries. Mrs. Edgar F. Fowler, chairman of the section, presided.

Wilson's Faith Lasted to End, Widow Writes

Forecast Destruction Of His Enemies Among Last Words

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.—Woodrow Wilson's last tortured days and his steadfast faith in his frequently assailed principles were disclosed today by the war-time President's widow in the last of a series of memoirs in the Saturday Evening Post.

To the very end, when he was so weak he could not write and at times could barely speak, Wilson predicted destruction for his enemies. She quoted his as saying:

"I have seen fools resist Providence before, and I have seen their destruction, as will come upon these again, utter destruction and contempt. That we shall prevail is as sure as that God reigns."

Mrs. Wilson thus described her husband's death:

"My dear one lay in a stupor, but when I would leave the room for a moment and return, he would lift his hand to take mine. Thus passed Friday and Saturday, the first and second of February.

"The nights were chill, but throughout them both knots of men and women remained in the streets. Sunday, February , dawned radiant and beautiful. While church bells called people to worship and crowds were kneeling in the street watching and praying, the frail body which had been racked with pain for so many years relaxed, and the enduring spirit took its flight."

In the spring of 1923, she said, "Mr. Wilson began to betray anxiety over the signs of the times and to speak to me of calling the public's attention to the ills toward which we were drifting."

She said it was a labor for him to write, but he had his typewriter brought to him.

"But this, too, was slow and tedious work, for he could use only his right hand. At length he gave it up, but the thoughts in his mind clamored for expression, and I undertook to write them down at his dictation. Often, when we believed him sleeping, he would ring . . . to ask me to come and take down a sentence or two."

And so was written Wilson's last published message, which he called "The Road Away From Revolution."

Randolph Asks Speed in Probe Of Gallinger

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, yesterday asked Representative Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, to speed a sub-committee inquiry into Gallinger Hospital complaints so that a report will be ready for submission to the House sub-committee on District appropriations early next week.

Randolph, who is co-operating with the sub-committee on hospitals, conferred with several Gallinger employes relative to working conditions at the hospital.

Bates, who disclosed he already has made a secret tour of inspection of the hospital, called an executive session of the sub-committee for today to map the outline of its investigation. At that time, he said, the members will decide whether or not to hold public hearings.

Both Randolph and Bates plan to take their findings before Chairman Collins and the District appropriations sub-committee, which has authority to recommend additional appropriations or changes in the administrative set-up.

It was the Collins sub-committee that estbalished the five positions of resident physicians at Gallinger. Officials of George Washington and Georgetown universities have since complained to Randolph of friction between these physicians and the volunteer staff of university doctors.

331 Pass Bar Tests as Many Find Diplomas Unnecessary

Some Are Southeastern Undergraduates; Ella Scott Ambury, Among 31 Women On List, Didn't Even Attend Law School

Hard work triumphed without college diplomas in the last District Bar examination, it appeared yesterday as the list of 331 successful candidates was shown to be sprinkled liberally with names of students who have not completed their law courses and to contain the name of one woman who has never been to law school at all.

Ella Scott Ambury, one among 31 women who passed, revealed she merely "read law" for six years in a law office. She did her reading at Catlettsburg, Ky., before coming to Washington in 1936 to accept a job in the general counsel's office of the Social Security Board.

At least six names on the list belong to students of Southeastern University who will not receive their Bachelors of Laws before June, James A. Bell, president of the University, said.

Among them were Mrs. Gladys E. Whalley, employe of the General Accounting Office; Margaret Rehorn, of the Department of Justice and Edwin Peterson, of the Federal Communications Commission; F. Thurston Weaver, George Greenberg and Robert McClosky.

Athletics had two star representatives. Among the lucky examinees were Bruce Kessler, physical instructor at McKinley High School and former local high school basketball star, and Ames W. Williams, ace member of the Washington Fencers Club.

Typical of response to the good news was the afraid-to-believe attitude taken by Elizabeth E. Williams, 23, stenographer at the State Department.

"There may be two or three more Elizabeth E. Williams in this town," she declared.

"You're just trying to play a bad joke on me," Mrs. Beulah Berry Hansen, of the Internal Revenue Bureau, said when she was told her name was on the list.

The 331 successful candidates represent only 39 per cent of the number who took the examinations, according to Ralph Given, secretary of the Committee on Admissions and Grievances, of the District bar, who described the percentage as "just about normal."

A complete list of successful candidates will be found on Page 25.)

Bandit Uses Air Pistols To Victimize Taxi Driver

Suspect Beaten to Draw by Falls Church Policeman; Two Cabs Stolen On Successive Days by 2-Gun Man

A two-gun bandit suspect armed with air pistols came to grief early yesterday after allegedly stealing a Washington taxicab for the second day in a row.

He was trapped by a town policeman in a filling station and beaten to the draw.

The arrested man identified himself as William H. Pollard, 25, of Arlington, Mass. He was charged by Fairfax County Police with highway robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon.

Pollard allegedly hired a cab operated by Paul A. Keefer, of 1745 First street northwest, in Washington at 2 a. m. Monday, and ordered Keefer to drive to Falls Church.

At the outskirts of the town he pulled out a gun, took $1.90 from the cab driver and escaped with the taxi, police said.

Early yesterday, Pollard hailed the cab of C. A. Mitchell, 1329 Florida avenue northwest, and asked to be driven to Falls Church. Near the same spot where Keefer was victimized, the second taximan was robbed of $3.

Making his way to the Falls Church police station, a mile away, Mitchell returned to the scene with Town Policeman C. B. Runyon. They found the taxi stuck in the mud, and later came across the suspect in a gas station, a mile and a half down the road.

As the suspect reached for a gun, Runyon drew his, and to settle the issue, lashed out with his fist and felled the two-gun toter.

Liquor Dealers Get More Time To Move Signs

Gift Equipment Worth More Than $10 Is Prohibited

As the Federal Alcohol Administration promised "a few more days of grace," Washington liquor dealers yesterday hurried to remove large advertising signs for smaller ones approved by the A. B. C. Board.

Today was the deadline for enforcement of the four-year-old ruling that retailers cannot display signs or equipment given to them by distributors—if they are worth more than $10.

The type of sign a man builds or buys to advertise his store "is no concern of ours," an F. A. A. official said.

Most of the signs in Washington liquor stores, however, were supplied by distributors.

"We've been enforcing it in other cities and are just now getting around to Washington. That's why we are inclined to give three or four more days to the retailers to learn whether their signs are O. K. and to get the unsatisfactory ones removed," it was said.

"The finest wish of these people is for the United States to go to war," he declared. "They know that if America goes to war, prices will go up."

A Steeplejack at 82, He Still Follows His Precarious Trade

ARTHUR LESLIE,
82-year-old steeplejack, climbs to a high perch

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

"Permit me," wrote Mrs. M. G. B., "to offer the name of Arthur Leslie who, I understand, is 80 years of age and is in active, daily business as a smokestack and flagpole painter."

It's a pleasure, Mrs. M. G. B., but you were guilty of understatement. The steeplejack you were talking about is 82, not 80, which undoubtedly makes him the oldest active practitioner of this precarious art in the country, maybe in the whole world.

Don't look for any catch because there isn't any. He does not work on miniature stacks and steeples for kiddies' playrooms. He is no ground supervisor. He does not go aloft with someone to help him. He is a regular steeplejack competing for jobs with the handful of others in his hazardous business, some of whom are young enough to be his great-grandchildren.

Asks No Odds in Job

That's the way his card reads. But he will climb anything, whether it is listed on the card or not, provided there is some legitimate work to be done and the ascent can be made with reasonable safety. Leslie is no "daredevil." He scoffs at flagpole sitters. But he'll turn down no sensible job unless, of course, the price is not right.

Leslie painted his first stack nearly 60 years ago and he has been in the profession ever since.

"I sort of get tired a little quicker now," he says, "but otherwise I don't think I've changed much. When I started out I took a lot of chances, as young men will, but I'm more careful now."

Lived in D. C. 30 Years

Washington has been Leslie's home for the last 30 years but he came here to work as far back as 1885, when the gas company hired him to paint a 70-foot iron stack. In the ensuing 54 years he has painted practically every metal smokestack of any consequence in the District.

Tallest stack he ever worked on was a 275-foot specimen, long since torn down, on the K street waterfront. If it will help you visualize the height, think of a 25-story office building.

His baptismal ascent was of a 250-foot smokestack at an iron foundry in Ashtabula, Ohio. That was "sometime in the early '80's." Not so tall but hard as nails, he was a member of the crew of a freighter which had shipped a cargo of ore to the plant. While ashore he heard that the stack was in urgent need of paint and that there was $350 in it for anyone who would put a couple of coats of pigment on Miss Gothic. At that time he was earning $30 a month as a lakes seaman. Hm-m-m, a year's pay in one grab.

Collected $350

A soft touch, he figured, for one who had been conditioned by climbing 175-foot masts on sailing ships in rough seas.

After collecting his $350, Leslie never went to sea again. Steeplejacking was in his blood. The lad who had run off from his Connecticut home at 14 to begin a mariner's life, who had rounded the Horn twice in windjammers, was embarked upon a new career.

It nearly ended abruptly a few years later when he took a 45-foot fall, head first through a corrugated iron roof. That laid him up for nearly a year, six months of which he had brain fever.

He has had other tumbles but that one was the worst. The most recent accident occurred 14 months ago. While he was away, some mischievous kids with rifles used his rope rigging, dangling from a smokestack, for a target. One bullet found its mark. When Leslie began to go aloft, the rope broke. Fortunately he was only about 20 feet in the air and suffered nothing worse than a wrenched back.

Never without a cigar in his mouth, he smokes about 20 of them a day. He has a cussing vocabulary second to none. He stands about 5 feet 6, weighs 160, has thinning white hair and a ruddy complexion. Vision is good in his right eye, bad in the left, the result of an injury in childhood.

He has no romantic illusions about steeplejacking. Thinks it is hard work but, paying well, worth keeping at until he has a sockfull.

2 Groups Ask Laws Remain Crime Judge

Justice Praised; D. C. Resident Urged As New Judge to Aid Civil Court

Two more District organizations last night protested the proposed transfer of Justice Laws from the criminal to civil bench, and a third association praised the judge's action during the term, in which he uncovered the Warring jury tampering scandal.

Transfer of Justice Laws to the civil sessions would leave only Justices Adkins and Proctor to carry on the criminal docket. The civil docket is also congested. Although Representative Goldsborough (Democrat), of Maryland, has been appointed to the District court, there is still another vacancy.

The corrections committee of the Council of Social Agencies, in a resolution, urged the selection of a new justice to the civil court in order to avert the transfer. The committee pointed out that if Laws is taken off his present duties, between 500 and 600 cases can be expected to pile up in the criminal section before October.

D. C. Resident Urged

The group requested the President and Attorney General to name a District resident to the local bench in the interest of speed and efficiency since, it was pointed out, it would take a stranger one year to become acquainted with court practice.

Hampshire Heights Citizens Association unanimously opposed the transfer, praising his qualifications as a criminal justice. Their resolution asserted the criminal branch of the court would be "crippled with only two justices."

The District Building and Loan Association Council commended Laws' procedure on the criminal bench. Arthur Bishop, president of the council, who proposed the resolution, declared criminal justice was of vital interest to every citizen of the District.

The Social Agency Council committee protested against a section of the Griffenhagen plan to reorganize the District government by which the Parole Board would be placed under the Board of Public Welfare.

Hampshire Heights Citizens voted approval for both the pedestrian control law and the Overton formula basing Federal contributions to the District expenses on Government-owned property. Increase in police and fire protection in proportion to increasing population was urged.

The association's school and education committee took under consideration a plan for construction of a new elementary school in the area to relieve overcrowding in Barnard and Keene schools.

Twenty-one new members were inducted.

Southeast Citizens

The Southeast Citizens Association rejected the Griffenhagen Government plan in its entirety last night and in a strongly worded resolution asked that the first eight points of the Federation of Citizens' Associations' report be adopted as guiding principle to the establishment of representative rule here.

Two other resolutions demanded that the proposed Southeast municipal lodging house be located elsewhere and that plans for the projected Lorton reformatory wharf on the Anacostia River, below Eleventh street, be scrapped.

A committee was appointed to investigate the status of the wharf plan and a bitter denunciation was made by Louis F. Frick of those who he said, would like to keep the Southeast an insignificant part of the city.

Rudolph L. Golze Quits U. S. Post

Rudolph L. Golze, general counsel of the General Accounting Office, retires today after attaining the age of 70.

He had served in various legal capacities in the Treasury Department before receiving his appointment to the GAO in 1921, the year that agency was established.

Indictment Defective, Says Doctor

Dr. Willson Calls Grand Jury Action On A. M. A. Case 'Bad in Substance'

Dr. Prentiss Willson, former president of the District Medical Society, protested yesterday that his indictment for criminal conspiracy to violate the Sherman antitrust act was "bad in substance."

Dr. Willson, who was named in the indictment along with 20 other prominent physicians and three medical societies, including the American Medical Society, charged in a demurrer filed in District Court through Attorneys John E. Laskey, former District attorney, and John L. Laskey, the indictment was defective on 35 counts.

The indictment, returned by a special grand jury in December, charged conspiracy to restrain the trade of Group Health, Inc., and of Washington hospitals. All the defendants except Dr. Willson protested the indictment last week with a plea in abatement, charging the grand jury hearings had been conducted in "violation of law" and that the "alleged indictment" violated their constitutional rights. A hearing on this plea has been set before Justice Proctor for Friday.

Among the 35 legal points to be argued in support of Dr. Willson's demurrer, the attorneys declared the indictment was made up in large part of allegations and opinions having no foundation in fact.

Commissioners Pay Tribute to Fire Chief Schrom

The District Commissioners paid high tribute yesterday to Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom, who died Monday night in Emergency Hospital.

"Chief Schrom . . . had ability, courage and steadfastness of duty . . . " a resolution by the Commissioners said.

"His long and faithful service to the District of Columbia, as well as his unselfish devotion to the public, endeared him to countless friends and associates . . . The Commissioners adopt this resolution as a mark of respect to his memory and of their affectionate regard for the man . . . "

Services will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the T. Frank Murray funeral home, 741 Eleventh street southeast. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Furloughs Likely Unless Congress Votes $850,000

Payless furloughs face employes of the Wage and Hour Division of the Labor Department, unless Congress comes across with $850,000 for the organization within the next two weeks.

Administrator Andrews declared yesterday that the funds are needed to permit his division to continue its operations until July 1.

Explaining that the money is included in the deficiency bill now pending in Congress, he said that should the appropriation "be delayed a fortnight, the division's employes will have to take advantage of payless furloughs."

Employes were paid yesterday, he explained, from an "accumulation of allocated but unexpended funds."

Andrews added he understood the House was scheduled to vote today on the proposal to grant funds for the Division.

Andrews Reticent

Congressional leaders explained that the House wants to continue Secretary of Labor Perkins' control of the pursestrings of the division while the Senate seeks to place expenditure of funds in Andrws' hands. Since no agreement was reached in conference the House will vote on whether to maintain or recede from its position.

The wage and hour administrator yesterday refused to make any comment on the question, because, he said, "I don't want to get involved in any controversial matter."

Referring to the speedy Congressional action which several days ago authorized the Federal Housing Administration to spend $2,500,000 of its reserve funds to continue operations, officials said an appropriation for the wage and hour division will have to be made since the organization has no resources from which it could draw to pay its employes.

Remington-Webster Opera's 2d Show Greeted by Cheers

All-Washington Cast Present 'Cavalleria Rusticana' and 'Pagliacci;' Performance Punctuated by Loud Applause

Washington has its own opera company—and it's a good one, if the applause it received is to be taken as a guage.

Loud applause and cries of "bravo" punctuated the performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" given by the Remington-Webster Grand Opera Guild last night in the Immaculate Conception auditorium. Nearly 500 people heard the group of amateurs perform.

Edward Johnson, manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York, sent a telegram expressing his "great regret" that his presence in Philadelphia prevented him from being present.

While the last operatic venture in Washington met a gloomy end two weeks ago when the musicians struck for their pay, the Remington-Webster group last night completed its second success. Although it owes its name to its two directors, Dorothy Remington and William Webster, of New York, the Guild is otherwise composed exclusively of Washington amateurs.

Ruby Arnold who sang Nedda in "Pagliacci," is a soloist at the Chevy Chase Baptist Church and the four Christian Science churches in Washington. John Seate sang the two tenor roles of Turridu in "Cavalleria Rusticana" and Canio in "Pagliacci." Lucille Lewis, Santuzza last night in "Cavalleria Rusticana," will soon be losing her amateur standing, having already contracted with the National Opera Company for a debut.

Joe Allen Jones, an employe of the Patent Office, not only sang Tonio last in "Pagliacci," but was an assistant director. Jones was graduated from George Washington University last week and spends his summers playing in a jazz orchestra. He and Alwin Laidley helped train the cast.

Ambassador Hotel Workers Strike; More Predicted

Employes of the Ambassador Hotel walked yesterday and strung a picket line in a move which union leaders say is "the first of a probable succession of strikes in Washington hotels."

While the management declared that "business is going on as usual," James HcNamara, union vice president, said the walkout was 100 per cent complete, involving about 170 busboys, waiters, waitresses, bartenders and elevator operators.

Negotiations between representatives of 13 hotels and those of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Alliance and the Bartenders' International League halted Monday. Hotel spokesmen said the "only question raised was that of a closed shop."

Taxi Group Wins Restraining Order

Justice Bailey yesterday issued an order restraining the District Public Utilities Commission until March 8 from withdrawing its recent recognition of the Town Cab Association.

The association, through Attorneys Mark P. Friedlander and Robert I. Sullivan, had asked for a permanent injunction.

Norman Lewis, president, had been notified by the commission that the association's original petition for recognition had been withdrawn on the ground that it "contained many names of men who had no intention of becoming members of the association."

Capital News In Brief

Victory Post Is Host

Victory Post No. 4, American Legion, was host to 400 last night in a house warming at the post's new hall at 414 Ninth street northwest.

Among the guests were the District department officers, John Thomas Taylor, national legislative committeeman; Watson B. Miller, rehabilitation officer; Joseph Malloy, national executive committeeman, and Gordon Hittenmark, radio announcer. Twenty new members were initiated.

Circle Hears Travel Talk

Idaho's Sun Valley and Salmon River country, "where continental comfort meets America's last wilderness," were described last night by Dr. R. A. Kirkpatrick before the Ladies of the Dorcas Circle of Hamline M. E. Church. Dr. Kirkpatrick's travels have taken him to remote places of the United States and other countries.

Candle Sets Home Fire

Young Paul Kennedy did an Abraham Lincoln last night with almost disastrous results.

With electric lights out throughout the Kennedy home, 608 Sligo avenue, Silver Spring, 10-year-old Paul was in his room studying his lessons by candlelight. The curtains and draperies were ignited. His father, George W. Kennedy, was burned slightly on the hands while putting out the blaze.

D. C. Student Honored

Lela Louise O'Neil, of Holy Trinity High School, Washington, was announced in an Associated Press dispatch from Pittsburgh last night as recipient of an honorable mention award in a national essay contest conducted by Duquesne University's Conference for Teachers of Science in Catholic High Schools.

Two Youths Leave Home to Make Own Way in World

From now on Robert Burks, 12, and Lawrence Blackford, 16, are going to make their own living, they told their mothers in notes left, police said before departing last night for Florida.

The notes further advised the mothers that there was nothing to worry about, that they knew what they were doing and how to take care of themselves.

The mothers asked police to send their sons home. Both live at 1419 Chapin street northwest.

Junior Board Bout Not 'Battle of Century'

That boxing match the Junior Board of Commerce staged last night will go down in Washington sport annals as a truly brutal affair.

For six grueling, thrill-packed rounds two businessmen athletes alternately swung haymakers (the breeze was considerable), "ganged up" on the referee and flopped exhaustedly on the canvas.

The principals were:

"Larrupin' Larry' Gichner, president of the Gichner Roofing Co., who is not to be confused with Fred . Gichner, of the Gichner Fred S. Gichner, of the Gichner

"Barrel-head Bill" Jacobs who bears a startling resemblance—except that he is half his height—to Tony Galento. Jacobs was substituting at the last minute for a fellow member of the Commerce Board, whose doctor 'phoned to say he was suffering from high blood pressure and unable to fight, officials reported.

Questioned before the fight, Gichner declared, "He looks little to me and I'll knock his ears off." Jacobs had not statement for the press, but declared in an aside to a friend "I feel pugnacius, but it's the first time I've ever had gloves on."

Officials of the Board of Commerce, foreseeing a dangerous fight, left no stone upturned in the way of of preparations.

Lyle O'Rourke, president, checked the insurance policies of both participants before he consented to the match, he asserted. Charles Zurhorst, member who operates a District funeral home, was on hand to take care of a fatality.

Said Zurhorst, "In this case, it will be a pleasure to do my duty."

"Larrupin Larry" Gichner (right) and "Barrelhead Bill" Jacobs said they were boxing, and they didn't mean oranges. The "bout" above, equal in many ways to some at Arnica Hall, was staged last night before Junior Board of Commerce.

WAR ADMIRAL, ILL, MAY NOT START

Riddle Star Develops High Fever

Stagehand Odds On Choice in $50,000 Widener 'Cap if 'Atom' Is Scratched

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 28.—War Admiral, most famous of the Man o' War offspring, today developed a high fever, which was almost certain to keep the "Mighty Atom" out of the $50,000 added Widener Challenge Cup race at Hialeah Park Saturday.

Trainer George Conway hoped the fever would subside by morning, but Owner Samuel D. Riddle said there was "very little chance" of the Admiral answering the post call for the Widener.

War Admiral was not withdrawn from the race tonight, however. Whether he would be sent into the Widener against such stars as Stagehand, Bull Lea and Pasteurized would be determined tomorrow, Conway said.

Won't Take Chance

Conway reported the Admiral's temperature "went up" this morning and then "settled down to 101 3-5, but rose slightly again." "The horse is not ailing seriously, but the fluctuation of temperature is an indication that War Admiral must bear wat ing," he explained. "If his temperature continues to fluctuate, naturally the horse will be a doubtful starter in the Widener," Conway said. "However, all will depend on how the horse shapes up between now and tomorrow morning."

Conway said he would not "take any chances" with the handsome, brown, 3-year-old son of Man o' War, "and to start he must be a fit horse."

The fever prevented the Admiral from taking his usual workout this morning, exercise he sorely needed before the big race. However, his appetite apparently was not affected, for he munched hay in his luxurious Hialeah Park stall this afternoon.

If the Admiral is withdrawn from the Widener, which appeared likely tonight, it will rob Saturday's race of much of its luster. It was to have been the setting of the first meeting between the Riddle star and Stagehand, last year's leading money winner.

To Stay in Condition

Unless serious complications set in, however, it was not believed War Admiral's present disability would affect plans to keep him in competition for the remainder of the year. His next scheduled start is in the $7,500 Excelsior Handicap at Jamaica, N. Y., May 6.

If Conway decides to withdraw War Admiral tomorrow, Stagehand will become an odds-on favorite for the Widener, chiefly on his showing in the McLennan Memorial a week ago.

Experts had regarded the Widener as a "two-horse" race between War Admiral and Stagehand, although the race, climaxing winter racing in Florida, also had attracted a star-studded supporting cast.

War Admiral, winner of the race last year, was a slight favorite to repeat and retire the gold challenge trophy offered by Joseph E. Widener, but Stagehand, with a legion of admirers, was receiving a late rush of support.

Bull Lea, who romped off with five important stake races last year; Pasteurized, winner of the Belmont Stakes, and Marshall Field's Sir Damion, undefeated in three starts here, were the only ones given an outside chance against the Admiral and Stagehand.

Gonzaga Cagers Beat Virginia Foe

Its fifth victory in five straight games was taken yesterday by Gonzaga Prep, contender for the Catholic prep title, when it drew away in the second half to defeat Fredericksburg High, 28-17, on the local floor.

For one-half Fredericksburg was able to hold the Purple to a 15-12 lead, but in the second half almost every man used by Gonzaga scored at least once. Lewis, of the visitors, was high point scorer of the game with 12, five better than the total of Judkins, who paced the winners.

Lou Gevinson K. O.'s Garcia In 3d Round

Bob Wilson Defeats Vic Finazzo in Rough Semifinal

Lou Gevinson knocked out Felix Garcia, of New York, last night in the third round of a scheduled ten-round bout that ended on a distinctly sour note to the unconcealed chagrin and disappointment of 1,000 of the faithful assembled at Turner's Arena.

Garcia toppled to the canvas after 43 seconds of the round, ostensibly after colliding with a supposedly terrific left hook to the stomach. The dun-colored invader, oozed down onto the carpet and lay stretched out cold.

Referee Eddie LaFond, who was in the best position to see, said Gevinson powdered Garcia with a terrific right to the chin, and followed with a less damaging left hook as he tumbled to the floor.

"It was a beautiful punch," said LaFond. "It was a sharp right, and it was the blow that knocked out Garcia. He was out when Gevinson followed through with the left hook to the body."

But it will be rather difficult convincing the audience that Garcia went down legitimately. Nobody saw the phantom right collide with Felix's chin. The swarthy and muscular ringster was strictly on the defensive from the first bell, covering and retreating as Gevinson stalked him with both hands poised for a knockout punch. Until he uncorked what proved to be the decisive blow in the final round Lou liiked rather impotent, and slower than ever before.

Bob Wilson (147¾) outpointed Vic Finazzo in a savage six-round semifinal that found both lads thoroughly exhausted at the finish. Finazzo (150) almost went down in the fifth when Wilson dug a damaging left hook to the midsection and followed with a sharp right to the head, but was saved by the bell.

Eddie Finazzo (141) partially redeemed the family honor by decisively outpointing Bill Carrigan (139) in another six-rounder. Carrigan weakened suddenly and badly in the last two rounds after absorbing terrific body punishment throughout.

Ben Cohen (159½) succumbed suddenly and indecisively to Bobby Rube (153) in the third of a scheduled four-round duel.

Traffic Court Broadcast Leads to Plea for Clubs $75,000 Campaign On

By Walter Haight.

It was last Friday, B. C. (Before Considine). I was double parked listening to the Traffic Court broadcast and lamenting on the fact that the song, "Flat - Foot Floogie" wasn't written before the cops took to scout cars. In addition to wondering how I could get my 1939 tags with the least trouble, I had an immediate problem of trying to find a parking place out of the range of the starlings who have developed a strong liking for my car since I wrote that pigeon story.

HAIGHT

"Your honor," came over the radio, "yesterday morning I trailed this man down Sixteenth street four blocks at 40 miles an hour——"

A car swung out of a parking place half-way up the block and a Post printer swung his jelopy into the once vacated position, got out and walked triumphantly toward our building. Funny that he should beat me to the draw, I never liked that guy anyway. He once drew an inside straight on Shirley Povich and me in the 7 a. m. (this is absolutely the last hand, fellows) consolation pot.

Chain and Sprocket Steed

The thought of Povich down beneath those sheltering palms didn't help my frame of mind. If Washington had a National League club in addition to the Nats, maybe I could get a baseball job, too.

"Is that all you have to say—$15.' came over the air.

Baseball and police—reminded me of the time I was press agent for those Police-Firemen games.

And then, there was the day

Cardinals Win 3d Game Of Season

Seton Hall Bows, 38-26, Despite Sadowski's Total Of Seventeen Points

By Jack Munhall.

Despite Seton Hall's man from Mars, Ed Sadowski, a cavernous individual who fixed his avid eye on Catholic University's basket to the extent of 17 points, the Cardinals last night extended their winning streak to the unprecedented proportions of two straight by whipping the invaders, 38-26, at Brookland.

By the same 12-point margin the New Jersey five used for victory in their previous meeting at Seton Hall, Fod Cotton's surprisingly improved Cardin.ls rolled up their third triumph in 15 starts and played their most effective game of the season en route.

The Cardinals' much smoother passing and defense almost went unnoticed in the heat of the rough game which saw the banishment of one Seton Hall player for personal fouls, the removal of another with a badly broken finger and the floor piled high with sweaty, struggling bodies in repeated scuffling for the ball.

Ed Parpon, Seton Hall forward, was led writhing in pain from the game in the first minute of play, the bone of his right hand middle finger sticking through his flesh. It was believed it had been doubled against his palm in a preceding scrimmage.

Bernie Coyle, visitors' guard, was given the hobo's hustle just before the finish for his fourth personal foul, but likely he would have had plenty of company in another few minutes. Nearly every starting player had two or more personals charged to him.

The game was a scoring duel between the five Catholic U. players and Sadowski, a 6-foot, 4-inch broad-shouldered center whose tiny, close-clipped head gave him the appearance of a story-book Martian.

Seton Hall, unable to obtain clear shots in face of C. U.'s tenacious guarding, was restricted to just one field goal in the first half as the Cardinals spurted into a 19-9 advantage behind a salvo of points by Joe Carrig, Carmen Pirro and broad-beamed Wayne Ambrose.

The second half was a little different, though, with the gangling Stadowski bounding up and down the court with Gargantuan strides to break up C. U.'s passing with his tremendous arms and send 15 points through the hoops for Seton Hall. Indeed Mr. Sadowski made all but two of his team's points in the last half.

It was C. U.'s final home game. The Cards finish their season against Baltimore Saturday.

Nat Regulars Arrive Today At Orlando

Veteran Catchers To Aid Harris With Rookie Pitchers

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 28.—The character of the Nats' headquarters here has changed virtually over night from a school of raw rookies to a big league training camp. Within the past 24 hours veterans of previous American League campaigns have been arriving singly and in pairs.

The most recent arrivals are Catcher Rick Ferrell, Pitcher Jimmy DeShong and Outfielder Taft Wright. Preceding them by only a few hours were Pitchers Pete Appleton and Monte Weaver, and Catcher Tony Giuliani.

By tomorrow morning every pitcher on the Washington roster is scheduled to be in camp, which means that Harry Kelley and Dutch Leonard are en route here.

Holdout Troubles Fade

Owner Clark Griffith's mild holdout troubles diminished today when he signed both Pete Appleton and Jimmy DeShong to contracts. The only unsigned players are the infielders, Buddy Myer and Charley Gelbert. It is Myer's habit never to sign a contract until he reports to camp (he is due March 7) and Gelbert has already talked contract terms with Griffith who says they are not far from agreement.

Among all the new arrivals, Manager Bucky Harris was happiest to note the appearance of the veteran catchers, Rick Ferrell and Giuliani. The Nats' rookie catchers have, to put it bluntly, been experiencing difficulty in handling the pitching of the brigade of hard ball throwers among the rookies in camp.

"Ferrell and Guiliani will be a great help in the training of the pitchers," said Harris. "This is no reflection on the young catchers in camp, but the kid pitchers will work with more confidence when Ferrell and Guiliani are handling 'em.

"And those two are in for some surprises, too. They've never been

Sabin, Tidball In Semifinals Of N. Y. Tennis

Sidney Wood Bows To Novice in Five Set Battle

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., the favorite, and Jack Tidball, of Los Angeles, a novice on board courts, moved into adjoining brackets in the semifinal round of the men's national indoor singles tennis championship today.

Sabin, as befits the No. 1 seeded entry, won in straight sets, 6—4, 9—7, 6—4, over lanky Gus Ganzenmuller, of New York. Tidball, on the other hand, had to battle for five sets and the better part of three hours to eliminate Sidney Wood, No. 3 in the seeded list, 2—6, 6—8, 6—4, 7—5, 7—5.

The Sabin-Ganzenmuller match at all times looked like one the Westerner could take when he pleased. As it happened, it pleased him to take it the easy way. In each set he let games follow service until the former Columbia basketball star's errors provided him with an opening. Each time Sabin broke Ganzenmuller's service, and then held his own to win the set.

Wood, maintaining his reputation for being utterly unpredictable, was rattling off winners and making unbelievable "gets" all through the first two sets. By then, though, Tidball had warmed to his work, was putting over his blistering first service in fine style and was moving up to the net, thus keeping Wood near the baseline, where he wasn't so dangerous.

Wood's defeat left only two seeded players still in the running, Sabin and Frank Bowden, No. 4. The veteran New Yorker, runner-up for this title the last two years, will meet Morris Adelsberg, of Brooklyn, tomorrow, while John Shostrom, of Chicago, plays Chauncey D. Steele, jr., of New York.

100 Enter Novice Ping Pong Event

With more than 100 entries already received, the management of the Ice Palace announced yesterday that they expected more than 150 entries in the table tennis tourney for novices to be staged tonight at the Connecticut avenue courts at 7 p. m.

The entry fee for the beginners tournament is 50 cents, which includes the cost of games played. Entry blanks may be obtained at the Ice Palace bowling alleys, ice rink or table tennis courts, and will be received up until the time of play tonight.

The list of events includes a men's singles, women's singles and mixed doubles. Trophies will be presented to the winners of each event, and to the runners-up in the two singles events.

Bruce Campbell Signs

Cleveland, Feb. 28 (AP).—Bruce Campbell, outfielder, signed his 1939 contract with the Cleveland Indians today, leaving the team nine holdouts.

Campbell, en route from Florida to his home in Chicago, stopped in the Tribe's office to sign.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 28.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Low-ball pitchers are the most effective in night games . . . and judging a ground ball at night is more difficult than judging a fly . . . scouts never recommend a player on the strength of his performances in night games . . . Joe Judge, in his brief career as player-manager at Baltimore, batted .400 in night games and .200 in the afternoon . . . when a scout wants to judge a pitcher's curve, he takes a seat directly behind the catcher . . . but if it's the pitcher's speed he's appraising, he sits halfway between the plate and either first or third base . . . in training at Orlando, the Washington Club is using old, recovered balls, as an expense-saving measure . . . the Nats' bill for balls last year approximated $12,000 . . . Outfielder Johnny Stone, who voluntarily retired in early June last season, to begin a battle to recover his health, received full pay for the year from the Washington Club . . . when he was taken ill.

POVICH.

For the first time in history, Hialeah is not raising its prices for the $50,000 Widener Handicap on March 4 . . . in that race, War Admiral is destined to go to the post at the longest odds since he was a 3-year-old . . . and it is conceivable that he may not be the favorite . . . an honor which may go to Earl Sande's sensational Stagehand . . . if War Admiral wins the $50,000 purse, and Seabiscuit fails to start or fails to win the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap on the same day, then Sam Riddle is expected to delay the Admiral's consignment to the stud in an effort to top Sun Beau's all-time money-winning record of $387,000 . . . Greyhound, the champion trotter, warms up for a mile race by jogging 5 miles around the track before the race . . . he circles the track three times the wrong way during his warm-up and knows that when he is running clock-wise he is not supposed to trot faster than a jog.

Masterson Outstanding Rookie

The inexperienced promoters of the recent Galento-Feldman fiasco at Miami dropped $4,000 on the affair . . . and have definitely retired from the promotional field . . . fighting the main bout at Miami this week is Joey Green, the Washington lightweight who was denied a license by the District Boxing Commission at one time . . . Joe Tinker, of the Cubs' famed Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance double play trio, now an Orlando realtor, confesses that during many of the years they starred for the Cubs he was not on speaking terms with Johnny Evers . . . Senor Roberto Ortiz, the Nats' big Cuban pitcher, whose English consists of "yes," "no," "hokay," and "take it easy," is engaged to a Havana school marm who teaches English . . . if Bucky Harris had to choose one rookie from among the 20-odd pitching prospects in the Nats' camp, he'd take Walter Masterson, the 18-year-old righthander . . . Masterson, a Philadelphia sandlotter last summer, was scouted simultaneously by Joe Cambria, for the Nats, and Ira Thomas, for the Athletics . . . Thomas offered Masterson a $2,000 bonus for signing and brought the papers to Connie Mack . . . who was feeling dyspeptic, or something, that day, and shouted he would pay no more bonuses to sandlotters . . . thus Cambria grabbed Masterson.

Harridge Knows His Tickets

John Ganzel, Orlando Chamber of Commerce's one-man baseball committee, who formerly played the outfield for Clark Griffith's Yankees in 1903-4-5, cashed in on the success of Babe Ruth . . . Ganzel managed the Rochester team which stopped en route North to play an exhibition game with the St. Mary's Industrial School team at Baltimore . . . a big, overgrown left-hander named Ruth held Rochester to five hits, and Ganzel recommended him to Jack Dunn, manager of the Orioles . . . when Dunn sold Ruth to the Boston Red Sox, he gave Ganzel a part of the purchase price . . . Ganzel, who will manage Washington's farm team at Orlando this season, touts one Bob Keller, Hagerstown, Md., youth, as a definite big league prospect . . . Keller played second base for Orlando last year and showed such batting ability that Ganzel will convert him into an outfielder . . . he's a kin of Charley Keller, prize Yankee rookie.

The Washington club is one of the few in the big leagues which does not pay the traveling expenses of the newspaper correspondents . . . the Yankees and Giants pay the way of as many as ten correspondents with each club, both at training camp and during the regular season . . . following the death of the late Ban Johnson, Will Harridge was regarded as presidential timber for the American League because of his rare ability to save the clubs railroad fare in planning schedules for the season . . . long experience in a railroad office served Harridge well in his task of taking advantage of the round-trip and stop-over rates of which comparatively few train riders are aware.

Cronin Due New Contract

Glenn Cunningham never appears in running shorts until his races are ready to start . . . because he is sensitive about his legs which were marred by a near-fatal fire during his boyhood . . . Joe Cronin, whose five-year contract to manage the Red Sox expires this year, is a cinch to get a renewal . . . but it will not be for five years and it will not contain the present clause preventing Tom Yawkey from firing him on the conventional ten-day notice . . . any ball player who feels that he is not getting a square deal in the salary terms of his contract, can appeal to Judge Landis . . . but thus far no player has made such an appeal in the 18 years Landis has been in office . . . baseball scouts sign regular player contracts and must gain the permission of the club owner if they wish to change affiliations at the end of the season . . . a club owner who signs a player must advise Judge Landis' office of that fact within ten days, or the player will be declared a free agent . . . as free agents, in past years, Catcher Roy Spencer was paid $15,000 by the Nats to sign a contract; Catcher Rick Ferrell was paid $25,000 by the Browns, and Outfielder Tommy Henrich was paid $25,000 for signing with the Yankees . . . Ty Cobb cost the Detroit Tigers $400 in 1906.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

We talked with anumber of Florida sheriffs recently about capital punishment. The Florida sheriffs are perhaps more familiar with capital punishment than peace officers elsewhere because in Florida a sheriff also has to serve as an executioner.

RUNYON

The sheriff of a Florida county where a crime is committed for which a criminal is condemned to death, is required to go to the State prison at Raiford and throw the switch in the electric chair death chamber. He can deputize this grim office to some one else if he desires, but it seems to be considered a high point of duty for the sheriff to do it himself.

A lawyer was telling us the other day that there is a moot question of law here involved. He said if a sheriff absolutely refused to do the job and also refused to appoint a substitute for that purpose, it is probable that the execution would have to be deferred, if not annulled, like when the executioner of France balks at dropping his knife on someone. This has happened in France. Lawyers are always thinking up puzzling situations.

Never Shirked His Job

However, no Florida sheriff has ever shirked his job. Some of the sheriffs I talked with have had to serve as executioners a number of times. One young sheriff has five executions coming up on him all at once in the near future. None of the sheriffs like it, but they feel that it is just something that comes under their oath of office and cannot be avoided.

Some of them think the State of Florida ought to hire an outsider as executioner, like Robert Elliott, the New York State executioner, who would come and go about his grimsly business with few having contacts with him, and there is some logic to their arguments.

Florida is quite different from the average State. It covers a tremendous area, to be sure, but most of the population outside the Miami region is old established. Many families have lived on the peninsula for generations. The Floridans know one another, or know of one another, to an amazing degree. Perhaps it is because they travel their own State quite a bit.

Unpleasant Duties

Thus it may happen, and indeed has happened, that a sheriff is called upon to execute a member of a family with which he is well acquainted and even quite friendly. You can readily see how this could be a most unpleasant duty and how it might engender personal and political enmity for a sheriff.

However, getting back to the general subject of capital punishment, we found most of the sheriffs we talked with just as dubious as law enforcement officers everywhere as to its efficiency as a crime deterrent.

Entries for Post-A. A. U. Basketball Tourney May Set Record

Lists Close At Midnight Tomorrow

Lighter Players Will Be Weighed Before First Tourney Game; Admission 25 Cents

Entries for the District A. A. U. championship basketball tournament to be sponsored by The Washington Post, close tomorrow night at midnight with prospects of a record-breaking number of teams in the 7 classes. If every team that has obtained a set of blanks files its entry before the deadline, the largest court competition in the history of the game hereabouts will be assured when the titular play begins at Eastern High School's new and modern gymnasium Monday night.

So great has been the rush of teams to get into line for these battles for Post trophies and official A. A. U. medals, that the supply of registration blacks has been exhausted. Miss Gluck, in charge of the A. A. U. office at the Boys Club of Washington, has sent a hurry-up call to the printers and she expects to have a new supply today. However, teams unable to obtain the individual blanks yesterday need only to get their club entries in to be under the wire. The individual registrations, for players who have not filled them out, must be filed, however, within the next few days.

Virtually every league and independent team, in the men's, boys' and girls' classes, in Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland is expected to be ready for action in the tournament. As soon as entry lists are checked, the draw will be made in the seven divisions and the schedule will be drawn up.

Many inquiries have been received regarding the weighing of the players in the lighter classes. There will not be a mass weight session as was the case several year ago. The boys will be weighed in just before they play their first game. If they make the weight at this time, it will not be necessary for them to get on the scales again. The basketball committee is using this method to discourage boys from trying to "make" the weight by roadwork or otherwise. If a boy is overweight he will be allowed to compete.

Winfree Johnson, chairman of the A. A. U. committee, made a popular announcement last night. Admission to each night's game will be 25 cents and this price will prevail throughout the tournament.

Players of all teams, whether or not they are scheduled to play, will be admitted on opening night by showing their A. A. U. registration cards.

Final details as to officials, etc., are being worked out by the committee. The tournament will be big league and streamlined from start to finish.

Pencheff, who stopped Tommy O'Toole last week with a "frog-cut," and in a previous appearance showed the audience a crab-toe hold it had never seen before, is seeking a championship bout with Jimmy Londos, and hopes to clinch it by throwing the obstreperous McCoy tomorrow.

FBI Draws Near Amateur Championship

Federal Bureau of Investigation's undefeated tossers virtually clinched the second half Heurich Amateur Basketball League championship last night, when they turned back PWA in the feature of a triple header at Heurich Gymnasium, 47 to 31.

Hold Strong Hand in A. A. U. Unlimited Court Ranks

Post Staff Photos.

Here's the W. W. Chambers five, prominent in the Heurich Amateur League, which is expected to go places in The Post-A. A. U. championship tournament opening Monday night at the new Eastern High Gymnasium. Most of the players are tournament veterans who have played on titular teams in other years. Left to right, sitting: Billy Bowers, manager; Johnny Williamson, Nat Mostow, Donnie Williamson, Jerry Zanelotti. Standing: Warren Kidwell, George Beach, Harry Silverman, Claude Colley, jr.

On the Line — With Considine

The page boy at the Capitol said he would see whether the gentleman from Connecticut could be disturbed, for he might be speaking on the Neutrality Act. But as it turned out, he could be disturbed and he came off the floor of the House of Representatives immediately, to talk a little baseball.

CONSIDINE

James A. Shanley is a democratic young Democrat from New Haven. He has iron grey curly hair, an easy smile, a brogue and an indestructible interest in baseball. Early this month he introduced H. J. Resolution 148, calling for President Roosevelt to designate June 12 as National Baseball Day, make it a National holiday, display flags on all public buildings, and officially recognize the opening of the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N. Y.

Along with the offering of the resolution, Shanley made what probably is the longest sports speech ever delivered at the Capitol. In his best Noah Webster manner, spiced with a lively Irish accent, he began:

"Mr. Speaker and my colleagues, I rise to direct the attention of this great House to the celebration that is scheduled for this year on June 12 in Cooperstown, N. Y. . . . Baseball has created the American ideal of clean, hard play. Baseball is America's game—American in origin, America in spirit, American in its appeal to player and fan.

"Baseball demands skill, dash and pluck, calm nerve in the face of crises. It has perhaps contributed more than any other activity to the development of the American temperament. Through its outlet for the energies and enthusiasm of player and spectator alike and in its teachings of hard play but fair, it has been the Nation's safety valve and its insurance against excesses now prevalent among other nations abroad."

Maybe He Wanted a Season Pass

From there on Shanley opened up. He quoted one of St. Paul's unanswered Letters to the Corinthians, Homer (the philosopher not the thing Ruth hit) Leslie Shane, the Anglo-Irish author, A. G. Spalding, and Steve Hannagan. And when he sat down after this ringing eulogy of an otherwise soulless business the old room shook with applause, a part of which might have been prompted by the statesmen's desire to insure their annual season's pass from Clark Griffith.

"Maybe the speech sounded like a bit of 'lobbying,'" Shanley told us as we walked down to the Senate Restaurant. "Sure, I love the game, but I can see its faults too. I think about half of the owners—including Griff—are harmfully shortsighted and that it has lost a lot of its charm since it became an out and out business. But it's still a great old game, and none of us appreciates what it has meant to the country."

Shanley, with pardonable bias, thinks that the worst thing that happened to baseball was the disappearance of Irish players. "They really made the game . . . gave it life and color, and played it with a scrappy amateur spirit that you hardly see anymore. We got too many dead-footed Southern ball players in the big leagues now."

Thinks Game Great Boon for Peace

He thinks the game has been a great boon for peace, labor accord and public health, down through the hundred years. And, as such, should be especially honored. "Even if this isn't really the hundredth anniversary of the game," he added, taking a spoon full of the bean soup without which no self-respecting solon would think of beginning his lunch.

I wouldn't be surprised if Frank Menke isn't right, when he says that this isn't the hundredth aninversary of the game. I've gone into the history of the sport pretty thoroughly and most all the old authorities agree that Cartwright really started what we now call baseball in 1845, when he formed the Knickerbockers in New York. The chairman of the Mills Commission—that's the group that A. G. Spalding appointed to decide on the inventor of the game—was related by marriage to Brig. Gen. Abner Doubleday. And as you know, the commission decided on Doubleday as the inventor, and 1839 as the birthdate.

"But what the hell's the difference?" Shanley asked. It may be older or it may be a little younger than a hundred years, but the fact remains that it's been the finest extra-carricula activity a people ever had, and we ought to show our appreciation. Lou Comiskeey is going to take a team to South America after this season, and I bet it'll do more to make the Americas a unit than the Pan American Conference did."

Baseball a Shrewd, Heartless Trade

Shanley's resolution, his speech on the floor of the House, the presence of the President at all opening games, and the way the loudspeaker guy at Griffith Stadium sometimes has to rout the Congressmen out of their pews and hustle them back to The Hill, to make a quorum, gives to baseball an official flavor that is perpetually puzzling to us. It is a hard, shrewd heartless trade, known for its sharp practices, shady dealings and feudal relations between the laborers and employees. But for a man in public life to say just that would be tantamount to treason, or using Old Glory for a neckerchief.

The game is outdrawn in attendances by basket ball and football, outdistanced in lore by the turf, and doesn't embrace as many actual competitors as fishing and hunting, golf, or perhaps tennis. But it is ancient, and thus hallowed, and a Congressman is cheered for speaking of it even in perilous times, whereas if he had opened his silvery trap about something that was more of a sport, or possessed of a better ethical record, he would have been slugged by Speaker Bankhead's gavel.

Hoyas Tackle Penn State at Tech Tonight

Georgetown Loses McGowan; Ill With Influenza

By Jack Munhall.

Without blond Jahnny McGowan, its center and a most valuable player who is confined to Yale University Hospital with influenza, Georgetown's courtmen will be decided underdogs against Penn State tonight in their crucial Eastern basketball conference game at Tech Gym. The game is scheduled for 8:30, following a preliminary.

McGowan was taken ill Saturday before the game with Yale, but Georgetown authorities withheld until yesterday the news of his condition in the hope that it was not serious. It has been confirmed, however, that the 6-foot sophomore sensation will be lost for the remaining games, including the city championship engagement with G. W. March 8. Whether McGowan, a promising outfield candidate, will be able to play baseball for Joe Judge this spring is not yet known.

McGowan's misfortune comes as a long-awaited break for Francis (Reds) Daly, former All-High at Tech, who has been chosen to take his place against the strong Nittany Lion. Daly, 6 feet 2 inches tall and a rugged defensive player, is expected to fill in capably, although McGowan's shooting and under-the-basket play will undoubtedly be missed.

Georgetown, holding first place by half a game, with five victories in eight conference starts, can clinch at least a tie for the championship by turning back the invaders. If it loses it still could gain the flag by defeating Pittsburgh here Saturday in its final league appearance and scoring another triumph over Penn State in the play-off, if the Lions are successful in their final two games. Carnegie can tie for the crown by sweeping its last three contests.

Jacobs' 676 Sets Record At Arcadia

Smith and Jarman in Star Roles for Team; Other News of Drives

The Jacobs Transfer bowlers set a new team record for the season last night in the Columbia Heights League. Rolling on the Arcadia Alleys, the Movers had a total pinfall of 676, a new mark. The high game was a factor in a team set of 1,853, the second highest of the year. J. B. Smith turned in a 172 to help the Jacobs Transfer cause while Paul Jarman contributed a set of 421. Smith game failed by 9 pins of tying the season's record for high. Charlie Walson having turned in 181 for School's Cafe earlier in the season.

Lutheran Ladies

Trinity No. 1 carried off all the honors last night, having a high game of 496 and a high set of 1,434. Martha Biggs, of that team, had 128 and 310 for tops among the individuals.

Lutheran Men

Al Zanner, with a game of 148 and a set of 385, led St. Paul No. 1 to stardom in this loop. The team had 614 for a game and a set of 1,718.

American League

Liberty Wallpaper set a season's American League team set record at Silver Spring Alleys, posting a 1,838 as it swept a series from Valley Forge. The new mark is one pin better than the former standard set by Stewart Bros. J. Nicro was Liberty Wallpaper's individual star, with a 390 set.

Distributors League

A season's record for team sets was made at Lucky Strike by Nichols, as the five members combined for a 1,666 total. Nick Syrnas and Jack Nichols, of the Nichols five, took game and set honors for the evening, 142 and 373, respectively. International, in second place, took the odd game from the league leaders, B'nai B'rith, as it rolled high team game, 568.

McCarthy Arrives at Yank Training Camp

Veterans Arrive At Various Training Sites; Drill Begins

St. Petersburg, Feb. 28.—Joe McCarthy, the Yankees' manager, arrived tonight with his wife still weak and wobbly from a bout with an influenza germ.

After giving Joe the big "hello," the writers started telling him about what the squad looked like and what was going on.

But Joe interrupted:

"Don't tell me, let me find out for myself. I might disagree with you."

He'll be on the job tomorrow.

Hutchinson No Dean . . . He Lacks 'Hot Air'

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—Young Frederick Charles Hutchinson may be able to pitch like Dizzy Dean or Van Mungo but from the way he's starting out with the Detroit Tigers he'll never be able to hold a light to them in throwing verbal balls and strikes.

For the highest priced rookie of the year, Hutchinson was unusually quiet about his own prowess today as he worked out with his new teammates.

The 200-pound, 6 foot 1½ inch youngster, not yet 20, must have been considered pretty good by the Tigers' bosses who gave $50,000 and several players for him, but he wouldn't even predict he would be a regular.

Red Sox's Advance Guard Arrives

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—Greeted at the railroad station by natives and tourists, the advance guard of the Boston Red Sox arrived here today to begin spring training.

Fourteen pitchers, including the venerable Lefty Grove, three catchers and several rookies were scheduled to work out tomorrow. Lefty, whose arm went dead last season, said he wouldn't "bear down" for a while yet.

Dietrich's Arm Okay Again

Pasadena, Calif., Feb. 28 (AP).—Manager Jimmy Dykes received the heartening news today that Pitcher Bill Dietrich's arm, ailing last season, was ready to help the White Sox get out second division.

Dietrich said: "I'm sure my arm's okay again."

Pitcher Frankouse Hit by Line Drive

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—Only a few minutes after the Boston Bees began their first spring practice session today, Pitcher Fred Frankhouse was struck by a sizzling liner off the bat of Rookie Johnny Hill, of Atlanta, and received a severe knee bruise.

Manager Casey Stengel ordered the veteran hurler to retire for the day. Hoping the accident was not indicative of things to come, the rest of the Bees swarmed through two fast workouts.

Coffman Becomes Giant Holdout

JOE McCARTHY

Giants' first real holdout today when he refused to accept Manager Bill Terry's offer and was given 24 hours to decide either to sign or stay away from the regular training camp at Baton Rouge, La. Hy Vandenberg, another pitcher, came to terms after a talk with the manager and Terry said Joe Moore would bring his signed contract to camp.

A practice game in which the Hubbles outslugged the Schumachers, 7-5, featured a long workout.

Browns Strengthen Club With Young Talent

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 28 (AP).—Manager Fred Haney, of the St. Louis Browns, intimated today he will attempt to strengthen the downtrodden club with younger talent.

Observers believed he would try this on the theory the youngsters could finish in seventh place just as easily as the veterans—if there is an indication the oldsters will do no better.

Spring training for Brownie batterymen will start tomorrow.

Reinhart, Farrington To Attend N. C. Tourney

Max Farrington and Bill Reinhart, athletic director and basketball and football coach, respectively, at George Washington University, will leave tonight for the Southern Conference Basketball Tournament at Raleigh, N. C.

These Farrington hopes to close football dates with Clemson and perhaps another school and arrange games for the 1939 basketball season and tennis matches for this spring.

Reinhart will remain in Raleigh only one day. But Farrington plans to stay until Friday, returning here Saturday morning.

Crepe Runs Brilliant Race to Beat Wise Prince by Head

Colt Clocked In 1:01 4-5 for Six Furlongs

Whitaker's Horse Pays $11.40 Under Nash's Good Ride; Great Albert Wins

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 28.—Running one of the gamest races of his career, B. F. Whitaker's chestnut colt, Crepe, today accounted for his second straight success in the 6-furlong Palatka Handicap. Felix Spatola's consistent but hard-luck veteran, Wise Prince, finished second for the third time in a row, beaten a scant head. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Armor Bearer was a poor third, four lengths away. Benjam and Floragina completed the small but speedy field as named.

Crepe, well handled by Ronnie Nash, paid the liberal odds of $11.40 for $2 and sped home in the fast time of 1:10 4-5.

Racing in a manner to indicate that he may prove to be the fastest juvenile on the grounds, Great Albert, from the Paragon Stable, made a show of his field in the 3-furlong opener. Running against the wind, the fast-breaking, quick-striding son of Pairbypair, which ran fourth in his debut, jumped away from his opposition in short order. He sped to the wire four lengths clear of the favored Red Dock. His time was 0:33 3-5.

Red Dick was the runner-up all the way and beat Williamstown by a length for the place. Great Albert paid $8.80 for $2.

Breaking from outside the stalls and beating the gate by several lengths, the 10-year-old Ladfield easily won the 7-furlong fourth race under Wayne Wright. The combination returned $17.30 for $2. Knight Warrior headed the highly fancied Perfect Peace for second money.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREAT ALBERT, $8.30, $3.50, $3.10; RED DOCK, $2.50, $2.30; WILLIAMSTOWN, $4.00.

GREAT ALBERT broke fast, drew out with a rush in the opening furlong and held sway thereafter to win as his rider pleased. RED DOCK broke into the air, settled into his stride quickly and disposed of WILLIAMSTOWN in the final furlong. WILLIAMSTOWN swerved to the inside after the start, responded gamely when straightened out and outlasted SHAKER-MAN. The latter broke tardily from in hand and finished gamely, but could not get up.

CARLA, saving ground and going in nearest pursuit of the leader in the early stages, swung to the outside coming into the stretch, took command after a mild drive and won with speed in reserve. AZAFRAN, outrun in the opening half mile, finished gamely to punishment and wore LADY VAL down in the closing strides. LADY VAL, a forward contender throughout, continued well in the final drive. THE SWARD, rated in front in the run down the backstretch, opened up a good lead rounding the turn, but folded up badly in the last furlong.

Daily Double, Great Albert and Carla, Paid $52.20.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:59. Off 3:01½. Winner, H. J. GREAT HASTE, off slowly, moved up gradually on the extreme outside in the final three furlongs, wore CROWNING GLORY down at the furlong pole and won as if much the best. CROWNING GLORY, in the thick of contention the entire trip, took a short lead entering the stretch, but was no match for the winner when challenged. CHIMNEY TOP, on the outside and prominent contender all the way, held on gamely through the stretch and outlasted FURFIBER. The latter, vigorously ridden, closed stoutly through the stretch and would have been third in a few more strides.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:30. Off 3:31½. Winner, Medway Stable's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADFIELD, $17.30, $8.10, $4.30; KNIGHT WARRIOR, $17.70, $8.30; PERFECT PEACE, $3.80.

LADFIEL outbroke the field, went close to the pace all the way and took command when straightened into the stretch, continued gamely when the final test came and maintained his advantage with determination. KNIGHT WARRIOR worked his way up gradually and closing gamely between the leaders, outlasted PERFECT PEACE. The latter, under light restraint on the inside early, was taken around the leaders coming into the stretch and moved up gamely, but then faltered in the final drive. NOTICE ME, a forward contender the entire trip, held on gamely in the stretch run.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:59. Off 4:02½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ONE JEST, $4.70, $3.20, $2.30; SUN VICTOR, $5.50, $3.40; COPPER TUBE, $3.60.

ONE JEST, displaying keen speed and rated in front under steadying restraint while saving ground, drew out at the furlong pole, but had to be vigorously ridden to withstand SUN VICTOR'S challenge. SUN VICTOR, rated back of the leaders to the stretch turn, moved up gamely on the outside when called upon, but could not overtake the winner. COPPER TUBE, on the outside and in close pursuit of the leader all the way, faltered slightly in the final drive. STEPHEN JAY made a bid on the stretch turn, but hung in the final drive as if short.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. The Palatka Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:29. Off 4:32½. Winner, B. F. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CREPE, $11.40, $4.30, $2.40; WISE PRINCE, $2.80, $2.20; ARMOR BEARER, $2.30.

CREPE, unruly at the post, broke alertly from outside the stalls and forced a swift pace, raced BENJAM into defeat, drew out while saving ground coming into the stretch, but faltered from his early effort and just lasted. WISE PRINCE, taken under light restraint in the early running, moved up courageously between the leaders entering the stretch, gained steadily in the final furlong, but could not overtake the winner. ARMOR BEARER, eased off the pace, yet going well up, was forced wide on the stretch turn, but finished gamely to punishment and disposed of the others. BENJAM, used up following the pace, retired through the stretch.

BILLY'S FOLLY went in close pursuit of the leaders under slight restraint until straightened into the stretch, was taken to the outside and, closing with determination, drew out in the final 60 yards. ODDESA LADY, used up forcing the early pace, continued gamely when challenged, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. BERTILLON, a trailer in the early stages, saved ground after leaving the backstretch and moved up fast in the final quarter mile to outlast UVALDE. The latter improved his position gradually while circling the field and closed stoutly.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:30. Off 5:32½. Winner, Mrs. G. R. MISTRALKIN, forced wide rounding the first turn, began to better her position on the extreme outside after leaving the backstretch and finished gamely to strong urging, but never threatened the winner. AMERICA FIRST began fast, showed good speed and held on well when it came to a drive to outlast BALAJIN. The latter saved ground the entire trip and closed gamely to punishment.

Delayed Letter Forces Ciencia Out of Derby

Envelope Must Be Delivered, Postmarked Before Feburary 15

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 28.—Uncle Sam's mail made Ciencia a long-shot today for eligibility in the 1939 Kentucky Derby.

Churchill Downs officials here came out with the disquieting news that Ciencia's nomination papers had not arrived but said they had been informed Max Hirsch, trainer of the Texas filly, had sent the papers by air mail in advance of the February 15 nominations deadline.

At Chicago, Col. Matt Winn, president of the American Turf Association, which owns the Downs and other tracks, said:

Open Discussion

"The question of Ciencia's entry is an open one with us. Max Hirsch said the entry for the filly was sent. So far we have not received it. If it arrives with the postmark within the February 15 deadline, Ciencia will be entered."

Nominations will be announced March 11 after all data on the thoroughbreds has been compiled.

Los Angeles reported Ciencia, winner of the Santa Anita $50,000 derby, will be taken to New York to be rested for the Pimlico Oaks, to be run on May 6, the same day as the Kentucky Derby.

El Chico Ranked Tops

Meanwhile, of the 115 Derby nominations, El Chico was being ranked tops with the winter bookmakers, but native Kentuckians still were unwilling to concede now that he is the standout of the Easterners' claim. Technician, Impound and Volitant also have their followers among the early bettors.

Horsemen here are debating the possibility that this year's Derby may develop into the most open scramble in recent years, with any one of a dozen or more eligibles having an excellent chance of triumphing in the Nation's greatest race for 3-year-olds, despite El Chico's impressive record.

A. T. & T. Net $8.32 a Share In Past Year

$9.76 in Previous Year $9.00 Dividend Paid Has $135,965,000 Cash

New York, Feb. 28.—Net income of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and subsidiaries—dropped 8 per cent in 1938 to $155,543,144, equal to $8.32 a share of capital stock, the company's annual report disclosed today. This compared with $182,342,866, or $9.76 a share in 1937, which was a high record for the world's largest public utility.

While the system fell short by $12,638,000 of earning the $9 annual dividend, the report pointed out that dividends were slightly more than fully earned for the two years 1937 and 1938 combined. In 1937 the balance after dividends was $14,162,000.

Gross operating revenue was $1,052,658,000, against $1,051,379,343 in 1937. The slump in net operating income was due, the report stated, "principally to increased wages and continued increase in taxes."

Another factor was the sharp drop in net earnings of the virtually wholly-owned Western Electric Co., the manufacturing subsidiary, from $19,514,000 in 1937 to $5,734,000 in 1938.

The system's cash assets at the end of 1938, including funds temporarily invested in Government obligations, totaled $135,965,000 against $165,908,107 the previous year. The company held Government obligations with a market value, December 31, 1938, of $41,314,000.

The system had a net gain of 430,000 telephones—60 per cent of the gain coming in the last four months of the year—in 1938, compared with an 876,000 gain the previous year. At the end of 1938 there were 15,761,000 telephones in service.

In the annual report, Walter S. Gifford, president, noted that the devastation wrought by wind, rain and floods in eight Northeastern States in September put the Bell system to the greatest test it has ever been called upon to face, and that it "met the challenge." The storm damage in 1938 was the most extensive the system ever experienced.

Bell system rate changes in 1938 resulted in a net reduction of approximately $4,500,00 but Gifford asserted that "rising costs, notably wages and taxes, are not only largely arresting the downward trend" but "may require some increases in rates in other places in spite of every effort to offset higher expenses through developments in the art, improvements in operating methods and rigid economies."

Cotton Futures Continue Rise

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Cotton futures rolled higher today in the wake of a sharp revival of activity in Worth street textile markets. Final gains of 4 to 9 points were posted as trade interests bought old crop options and foreign buyers concentrated on the October and December deliveries. A fairly active market weathered professional profit taking and Southern selling as prices advanced.

The Market

By J. D. Tompkins
A Special Correspondent.

New York, Feb. 28.—Wall Street's dullest February, from a trading standpoint, ended in a burst of welcome activity and strength in securities. Rails took command for the third successive day and made good progress on the up grade. Aviations eased and oils lagged for lack of buying interest but all other divisions gained. Steels, motors and coppers were particularly buoyant and modest advances by utility, store and food descriptions carried those groups to new highs for the year.

It was one of 1939's rare million-share days, so far at least. Turnover of 1,059,980 was the largest since January 31, and the first time the million-mark has been passed in stock exchange dealings since February 6. The composite for the 100 leading big board stocks, excluding aviations, ended 0.48 point higher, the rise for the 70 industrials being 0.41 point and for the 30 rails 0.63. In the latter bracket, the 20 high-grade carrier issues contributed 0.86 to 0.87 point and the 10 grade B's, only 0.14.

Strength and Activity

In general, the market's performance must have been most cheering to the long side. The breadth of trading, indicated by dealings in 831 big board issues; 1 to 2 point advances in many individual issues to the accompaniment of rising volume, and continuation of leadership by choice stocks, all suggested that recent good news, both business and political is finally encouraging new buyers. In addition, the bulge in rail share prices, reflecting steady betterment in traffic and earnings for the industry, is all important to the technical position of the later list, providing a general advance is to develop and hold. It was a trade treat to the tape watchers to see a carrier stock, New York Central, at the top of the most-active list. It added ¾ point. Union Pacific was at a new high at 103½, closing at 102¼ for a net gain of 2¼. Illinois Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway were all ahead at the end of the day.

While observers admitted that predictions for more active markets may be premature, opinion in the financial district does lean to the view that stocks are shaking off the lethargy which has gripped them since the first of the year. Price levels, it is pointed out, have held well through January and February with little benefit of public participation, trading being largely professional.

Signs of Upturn

The last week of February saw evidences of a change and disclosed undeniable up-side possibilities on even moderate buying support. The month ended with a total of only 13,873,323 shares having figured in stock exchange tax transactions, the dullest February since 1921, when the volume was 10,272,592, and the smallest month since September 1934, when 12,635,870 shares changed hands. February bond dealings, incidentally, were the lightest for that month since 1918, totaling only $118,993,000.

While American Telephone closed fractionally lower today, it reached a new high since 1937 at 159¾ in early dealings. Peoples Gas spurted 2⅛ on announcement by the chairman of the board that regular dividends would be discussed at the next directors' meeting. Chrysler, Delaware & Hudson, Atchison, Bethlehem Steel, Atlantic Coast Line and Steel common all were good gainers. The second successive day of lower prices for aircrafts resulted from profit taking, with volume tending to dry up as quotations receded.

Listed bonds were buoyant today, in a session that was almost normal in trading volume. The turnover of more than $6,000,000 contrasted with much duller previous sessions. High-grade investment issues were up fractionally, under the stimulus of the disclosure that no new money will be sought directly by the Treasury next month. Speculative obligations showed advances ranging from fractions to 4 points. Foreign dollar bonds reflected unusually good inquiry.

Long-term United States Treasury issues continued the advances that started late the previous day in counter markets. Interest in outstanding bonds was whetted sharply by the announcement that no new money borrowing would be included in the March financing. Net gains in the formal trading ranged from 1-32 to 19-32 point. Fourteen intermediate and long-term issues moved to fresh high records. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporations also improved. Among best grade corporate issues small advances also were the rule, with a few records attained.

Speculative railroad bonds were lifted easily by a modest buying wave and a disinclination of holders to sell. Medium-priced issues and borderline bonds alike were in request, but the default rails lagged. Alleghany Corp. bonds advanced, and the utility holding issues moved breezily upward. Industrial convertibles responded to the gains in related equities. Local transactions proved a dull spot in the list, but other special groups did well.

European dollar bonds were favorites in the foreign section, possibly because war reports seemed less ominous. Czech issues and Polish bonds advanced readily, and some of the German default obligations also were in demand. The Italian group reflected modest inquiry, and there was good buying of French, Belgian and Scandinavian issues. Latin-American default obligations drifted idly, pending some indication of the trend of Washington conversations.

Wheat Prices Dip Below Previous Day

Shipping Interests and Mills Turn Buyers After Early Drop

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—After another slight recession based largely on reports of beneficial rains and snows in the grain belt, the wheat market righted itself today, prices closing only a shade lower than yesterday.

Receipt of abundant precipitation in southwest winter wheat districts just before the start of the spring growing season and March winds threw a wet blanket on trade gossip of possible crop scares at least for a while. The support that gave the market its equilibrium after an early slump of as much as ½ cent a bushel apparently came from shipping interests and mills in connection with shipping sales of 87,000 bushels and scattered flour business.

At the close wheat was unchanged to ¼ lower than yesterday, May 68⅛@68¼, July 68⅛@68⅜; corn was ⅛ off to ⅜ higher, May 48⅝@48¾, July 50¼@50½; oats unchanged to ⅛ down; rye unchanged to ⅛ higher, and lard 5 to 10 higher.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Hands strong on distribution but low on high cards play some queer tricks, and probably none is more interesting than one which arose in a Long Island duplicate tournament recently. Generally, even in distributional hands, the bidder will have at least an honor trick some place in his hand but imagine making five-odd with the bidder having no card in his hand higher than a jack—and only one of those.

However, that is the situation in today's box. Unfortunately, the bidding reported was somewhat sketchy. It seems though, that West opened the bidding with a heart logically enough and North doubled.

East and West reached five hearts being forced there by a four-spade bid—and then South with two void suits and his partner's double and raise in spades to spur him on took what he thought was a certain sacrifice at five spades.

West opened the king of clubs, which took the trick. With the dummy now void of clubs West reasoned that the only way to salvage another club trick would be to shorten dummy,s trumps and he led his singleton trump. Declarer went right up with the ace in dummy, ruffed two hearts in his own hand and two clubs in dummy.

On the second club lead from the closed hand the queen of trumps was played from dummy and East overruffed with the king. And this incidentally, was the play that gave the declarer her contract.

After overtrumping the queen of spades, East had no lead that would not put South in. South's clubs were set up, and after picking up East's last trump, the clubs accounted for the balance of the tricks to give her five-odd and her contrast.

Of course, the hand can be set if East does not overruff the queen of spades. If East allows the queen of spades to hold, the contract will be set one trick, which is what happened at three other tables, where South took the sacrifice of five spades. In these intances after the queen of spades trick, the ace of diamonds was played from dummy, South throwing off a club. The next lead was also a diamond, which South trumped. A club was led by South, East trumped, and then his king of spades accounted for the setting trick.

On the surface it appears that the sacrifice of five spades is a good bid for South. Had we sat North, however, and West had bid five hearts, we would have doubled, with two aces and five trumps to the jack. Five hearts, of course, cannot be made against good defense, as North-South will take a spade, a diamond and a trump. Too bad the full details of this bidding are not known and then some comment could be made it.

But, speaking of distribution here is another hand, not so freakish but interesting in that it involves several play factors.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

'TWAS TOLD to us: that GAO contemplates sumbitting a supplemental estimate, for the fiscal year 1939, in the sum of $155,000 which would be necessary to carry until June 30, next, the emergency employes (approximately 2,400) now on the rolls. If it's not forthcoming, a two-week period without pay is the prospect . . . that WPA's Administrator Col. Harrington will resign in June—a rumor we take with a grain of salt . . . that two years will pass before all those persons who looked to February 1 as the civil service millennium, will get civil service status. And this, more than anything else, demonstrates the neglect that Congress had traditionally shown to the Civil Service Commission. The commission never was equipped and staffed to handle the routine that occurred before the June 24 executive orders came and unloaded something really big in its lap.

It is a fact that upon no agency in Washington is so much venon turned as on the Civil Service Commission. The motives are quite apparent in most of the cases. Frequently the squawkers are disappointed job seekers; otherwise they are men and women who, having noticed the shortcomings of the civil service system, begin their drummings with some feeling of uplift against what they refer to as the inefficient commission.

The fact is that they are doing their howling too late. They should have begun some years ago and howled where it would have done some good—before Congress, which is the only source from which the commission can get funds to operate efficiently upon.

They come to this column and ask: "Why don't you blast that outmoded civil service system?" We reply now: Why didn't you ask your Congressman years ago to supply the commission with the stuff it takes to be efficient? Admittedly, many things in the system have been at fault, but no system, good or bad, could go modern and effective overnight on just enough money to keep the cat alive.

SINCE this column first announced, some weeks ago, the arrival in town of the Postoffice Department philatelic truck—which was to have roamed America in the interest of stamp collecting—it was with gloom that we heard the subcommittee on appropriations' chastisement of the very notion of the truck. That sub-committee appeared to look on the truck as a fol-de-rol, a boondoggle of some sort.

It refused the request for $6,560, necessary to man the truck and buy the gas. It lambasted the Postoffice Department for its temerity in suggesting such a thing as an educational truck. The department yesterday was sore. It had planned to have the President and Postmaster General Farley see the truck on its way. There would have been a formal launching. The department stated its side to us yesterday like this:

Only $6,500 was asked for an enterprise that was requested by educational institutions and stamp collectors who contribute $2,000,000 truck. It would have created additional interest in stamp collecting and thereby increased the revenue from collectors—which has grown (the only net clear money the department gets) annually to the revenues. The truck cost the Government nothing. It was made at the Chicago Postoffice shops by regularly employed postal workers. It was no expensive apparatus; it was converted from an old mail delivery from $300,000 in 1933 to approximately $2,000,000 in this good year.

CONTINUING in the department's viewpoint: The truck is now reposing in a vault-like building at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. National picture magazines have asked to photograph it, but it was held in secrecy for a surprise and sudden joy for the stamp collectors and school children. It is reposing there, doing nobody any good while the sub-committee looks at the very notion of it in holy horror. The Postoffice Department always has been a conservative old lady. It never has gone in seriously for frills. And why should the sub-committee think now that the department didn't have its business eye out when it built the truck?

Bob Burns Says—

That was sure a shockin' thing that happened in Lima, when a beautiful young woman got all her clothes ripped off by a bolt of lightnin'. They say she was left without the power of speech—but a man passerby who hadn't been able to speak for years recovered his voice!

Scientists are claimin' now that lightnin' strikes the same place more'n once, so this young lady had better take to cover the minute she hears a clap of thunder. If she don't, she'd better carry one of Sally Rand's rubber bubbles with her an' start blowin' it up every time she sees a cloud in the sky. Gosh, I'd hate to think of walkin' down the main street of Hollywood an' havin' a streak of lightnin' do a strip act on me? But, if it ever did—I got it all figgered out as to jes' what I'd do. I'd head for the nearest nudist colony where I wouldn't attract no attention!

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Detected in Mischief

Who takes a chance, his life at stake,
Will little sympathy awake.
—Old Mother Nature.

Chatterer the Red Squirrel is quick. Small people usually are quick. They often have need to be.

After days of spying on Hooty the Owl and Mrs. Hooty at their nest in a tall tree in the Green Forest the opportunity he had hoped for and waited for had come most unexpectedly. Opportunities have a way of coming unexpectedly. Be that as it may, Chatterer's opportunity had come. The nest of the big Owls was unguarded. Both were in pursuit of Jumper the Hare, who was running and dodging for his life. There were eggs in that nest. Chatterer had not seen them, but he knew it from the actions of Hooty and Mrs. Hooty. Chatterer was so hungry for an egg that no risk seemed too great to get one. It would take no more than a couple of minutes if it did that, for him to climb to that nest.

Chatterer hastily glanced in the direction where the chase had disappeared than ran down the tree, he was in, across to the foot of the nest tree and started up. It is amazing how fast that red scamp can climb when he is in a hurry. He was in a hurry now. He didn't stop once. He didn't really wish Jumper the Hare any hard luck, but he did hope that Jumper would keep those Owls busy.

He reached the nest. Hastily he glanced behind him. He saw no one. He scrambled up over the edge of the big nest and there he sat for a moment and gloated. He was looking at two big eggs, dull white, surrounded by soft yellowish down. Chatterer's eyes sparkled with greediness. For the instant he quite forgot where he was and whose eggs those were. He forgot that he had no business, there, no business at all. He forgot that he was in mischief and that at any minute he might be detected in it. He just sat there and gloated.

Then as he moved forward to reach for the nearest egg he felt rather than saw the presence of danger. He didn't stop to find out what that danger might be. Time enough for that later. Without so much as a fraction of a second of hesitation he leaped across that nest and whisked over the edge of it. That is just the way he went—whisked.

Chatterer was none too soon. Even as he whisked over the farther edge of that nest, Mrs. Hooty landed just where he had sat gloating. In her great, fierce, yellow eyes was anxiety. She leaned forward to examine those precious eggs. She turned them a little. They appeared to be all right. The anxiety in her eyes gave way to a glare of anger. She hopped over to the other side of the nest and leaned over to look down. She was just in time to see a flash of red disappear around the nest. It was the end of Chatterer's tail as he whisked around on the under side of the nest.

Then began as strange a chase as ever was seen in the Green Forest. Around and around on the outside of that nest dodged Chatterer while Mrs. Hooty tried in vain to get at him. You see that big nest was constantly in the way of her big wings. Terrified, but not too terrified as to not know what he was about, Chatterer peered around that nest to watch Mrs. Hooty and so anticipated her every move. He had need of all his quickness now. It was his life that was at stake. He couldn't afford to make one false move, one mistake.

Chatterer had no time to do anything, but if he had had I am sure that he would have right then and there wished that he had minded his own business; that he had not yielded to temptation. Most of us do have some such wishes when we get into trouble. And Chatterer was in trouble now. Yes, sir, he was so, and don't think differently. He was in trouble enough, but more was coming. Hooty was returning from a fruitless effort to catch Jumper the Hare.

New Pope May Save World, Says Walpole

Cardinals Cannot Ignore Political Effects of Vote

By Hugh Walpole.
(World Famous Novelist.)
Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

Vatican City, Feb. 28.—In spite of many great events in the world that are now approaching a climax, it may safely be asserted that the election of a new Pope, which will be settled by the conclave of cardinals opening tomorrow, will be one of the most tremendous in its effect on world history.

It has not always been so. Many elections in the past have been concerned almost entirely with the private history of the church. In fact, the election of Pope Pius XI 17 years ago took place in a world much more composed and tranquil than the present one.

It would be a grand thing for everyone if this election could be concerned only with the spiritual life of the great Roman Catholic Church. But, alas, that cannot be. It has been becoming more and more clear since the late Pope's death that the political consequences of this election must be of the greatest importance.

Many Names Mentioned

The late Pius XI held with marvelous spiritual conviction from first to last that he must defend the spiritual rights of the children of the church, and from whatever quarter they seemed to be attacked he bravely defended them.

One may say at once that whoever his successor may be, he will have no light task in following him. Many names have been discussed, as was inevitable, during the last fortnight. There are, for instance, saintly men like the Pope's secretary of State, Cardinal Pacelli, and like Cardinal Della Costa, of Florence.

Here are two men of whom one might say at once that they will always, whatever may happen, have God's will first in their hearts. Cardinal Pacelli has, of course, been much identified with the late Pope's opinions and trends of mind. The late Pope himself frequently asserted that he hoped Cardinal Pacelli would be his successor. This, of course, has its advantages and its disadvantages with regard to Pacelli's election.

New Policy May Be Sought

It has always been held that the late Pope's secretary of state is not a likely person for his successor. And this is mainly because, after a long pontificate, many men wish for a new direction of policy. It seemed at first that this would inevitably turn against Cardinal Pacelli's election, but during the last few days it is understood that the foreign cardinals have been arguing strongly in his favor.

This is of great importance. It perhaps is not generally recognized that although of the 62 cardinals 56 per cent are Italians, only 10 per cent of the whole Catholic Church is of Italian nationality. The foreign cardinals in this conclave represent the world outside Italy, and it is likely that they will impress upon the conclave very forcibly the views of the world on the Roman Catholic Church. They will have, therefore, great effect on the ultimate selection.

What is desired by all, I understand, is that the new Pope should be a man of absolute spiritual character. Nothing less than that will do in these days when materialistic forces are so strong. A saint with political wisdom is wished for by all the cardinals. Undoubtedly there are such men who will sit and vote in this conclave. Pacelli, Della Costa and Massimi are a few of the well-known individuals among these personalities.

It may possibly be that Cardinal Pacelli, because of the support of the foreign cardinals will be elected very early in the conclave, but if the conclave continues beyond two days, a situation that has so frequently occurred in other elections may arise.

March Enters Like Lamb, but Lion Is Near

Clear Skies Predicted Today, Clouds and Rain Tomorrow

March came into Washington like a lamb last midnight on the heels of the wetest February in the last 40 years. But storm warnings were posted along the Atlantic Coast from Sandy Hook to Eastport.

A torrential rain yesterday flooded Rock Creek and the Anacostia River near the Peace Cross, and pushed the month's total rainfall up to 5.6 inches, more than twice as much as in the same month of 1938. February had 15 days of rain.

Fair and colder weather is expected today and tonight, but tomorrow will bring increasing cloudiness, the Weather Bureau said, and rain again at night. The clear skies today will be accompanied by fresh southwest and west winds.

Yesterday's mild temperature, which hovered between 40 and 45, was typical of the winter, warmest since 1931-32. Mean temperature for the winter was 39.5, or 4.4 above average. The mercury rose to 74 the past month and four days later, the 23d, plummeted to 17.

The average temperature during December was 38.4, or 1.8 degrees above normal; January, 37.8, or 4.4 above normal, and February, 42.2, or 6.9 above normal.

Only 7.8 inches of snow fell in the season, January claiming all but .3 inch.

Monopoly Quiz Seen as Aid To Business

Recommendations to Aid in Recovery, Says O'Mahoney

The Temporary National Economic Committee "is affording an opportunity for Government and business to join hands," declared its chairman, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, yesterday, following presentation of testimony warning that both capitalism and democracy are threatened by monopolistic practices of big and little businessmen.

"It's not going to do any good to prime the pump unless we find out what caused the economic collapse before the days of the New Deal," O'Mahoney observed, as he stated that any legislation that might ultimately be recommended by the "monopoly" committee "will fit into the business recovery drive."

Pointing out that "in a democracy, you have to get a consensus of opinion," O'Mahoney said that "legislation which will be of advantage to the United States in a crisis must be such as has the support of a considerable element of our society."

Ballinger Testifies

Commencing that part of the investigation under sponsorship of the Federal Trade Commission, the committee yesterday heard Willis J. Ballinger, director of studies of the FTC, assert that free capitalism and democracy are intertwined. Unless a competitive system is maintained, Ballinger declared, democracy will give way to some form of dictatorship.

"To avoid the degeneration into totalitarian controls, something that we known as free initiative must be permitted and encouraged" he said, but he pointed out the American antimonopoly laws "have proved ineffective in preventing the steady growth of monopolistic practices in American industry."

If business "is permitted to organize and establish its own rules of action," Ballinger stated, "the result will inevitably be to cover all business into a monopoly system."

Agree With Ballinger

Both the other witnesses, Prof. Frank A. Fetter, of Princeton University, and John T. Flynn, writer and economist, agreed with Ballinger that this type of "self rule" in industry is contrary to the public good. It "makes men judges of their own cause," said Fetter, while Flynn asserted it is antidemocratic and is the first step to fascism.

$3,508 Reported In Church Drive

Total contributions of $3,508 from 30 churches and many individuals were reported yesterday at the first report meeting of the Washington Federation of Churches campaign.

The campaign, which began last Sunday in some of the 148 churches in the federation, aims to raise $18,000 before March 15. At yesterday's meeting in First Congregational Church the Calvary Baptist Church was reported first to reach its quota. William E. Harward was leader of the Calvary drive.

Anacostia P.-T. A. Meeting

The executive committee of the Anacostia Junior-Senior High School Parent-Teacher Association will meet tonight at 8 p. m. at the home of Mrs. J. P. Corkery, 1374 Taylor street northwest.

Sharpe, Civic Leader, Named Board of Education Member

C. Melvin Sharpe, official of the Potomac Electric Power Co. and president of the Community Center Council, yesterday was appointed a member of the Board of Education by the justices of District Court.

SHARPE

Sharpe will take his place on the board today and serve until June 30, filling the vacancy left by Henry I. Quinn who resigned recently to combat recommendations of the Griffenhagen report which would make the District educational administration a department of the District government instead of a separate agency.

Sharpe said yesterday he favored retention of the Board of Education in its present form, separate from the District government.

While he said he would resign as head of the Community Center Council, one of the first matters Sharpe will hear, when he attends the March meeting of the Board of Education today at 3:30 p. m., will be a resolution from the council protesting the Griffenhagen recommendations.

The resolution, adopted Friday, will ask the Board of Education to oppose any legislation under the Griffenhagen report, which would affect the board's present supervision of the Community Center department. In addition, the board's committee on legislation will submit a lengthy report on the Griffenhagen proposals which would end the board's status as an independent body.

Sharpe, who lives at 2930 Forty-fifth street northwest, is executive assistant to the president of the power company. He came to Washington in 1904 and entered Government service in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. He joined Pepco in 1920.

Long prominent in civic affairs, Sharpe is a director of the Board of Trade, a trustee of the Children's Hospital, and active in the Better Business Bureau and the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association. He is a member of the Columbia Country Club and the Blue Ridge Road and Gun Club and active in Masonic organizations.
